VIENNA ANNOUNCES AUSTRIA QUITS

Copenhagen, Oct. 26.—It is officially announced in Vienna that preparations are being made for demobilization of the Austro-Hungarian army, according to a dispatch received from the Austrian capital today.

The report that steps are being taken towards the demobilization of the Austro-Hungarian army are confirmatory of information that has been leaking out from the Dual Monarchy for some time that Austria is about to quit the war. The internal situation in Austria is acute. The country is seething with revolt, the last uprising reported being that of the Croatian soldiers, who seized Fiume. The nnation has already started to crumble, with Bohemia declared independent, and Hungary about to secede if she has not already done so, in effect. The nationalist ambitions of the various races making up the Austro-Hungarian nation have been furthered by President Wilson's recent note recognizing the sovereignty of the Czecho-Slavs. The whole country is known to be on the verge of famine and utterly war-weary.

CHALLENGE TO WEEKS BY WALSH

Ex-Governor Calls Upon Senator to Meet Him in Joint Debate

Former Governor David I. Walsh, Democratic candidate for United States Senator, today challenged Senator John W. Weeks to meet him in a public debate and defend his record as a public servant.

This challenge is Mr. Walsh's answer to Senator Weeks' denial made in Quincy last night of the charge that he was unfaithful to the interests of the soldiers and their families in attempting to reduce the amount of war insurance from $10,000 to $7,500.

Here is the charge:

"I charge that Senator Weeks was unfaithful to the interests of our soldiers and their families in attempting to reduce the amount of insurance from $10,000 to $7,500, that our soldiers might be authorized to take for the protection of their loved ones at home, while they fought the nation's battles."

Here is Senator Weeks' denial:

"The charge in this case cannot be substantiated. Various amounts of insurance were discussed and the liability of the government under this new and unusual step was given consideration.

"I am not in the habit of voting blindly for legislation which will cost the government hundreds of millions

CRAZED MOTHER KILLS TWO CHILDREN

Wallingford, Ct., Oct. 26.—Crazed by the death of her husband from influenza, Mrs. Mary Bustai, widow of August Bustai, murdered two of her small children, slashed the throat of a third and probably fatally wounded herself today. When intercepted she was about to end the lives of two other children.

Mrs. Bustai's husband died at the local hospital on October 14, and the woman has since been mentally unbalanced.

5,000 Prisoners in Two Days Taken by Italians

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 26.—The Allies during the last week have reclaimed four hundred square miles of Belgian and French territory, General March, chief of staff, announced today. Since the beginning of Field Marshal Foch's counter-attack on the March on July 18, the Allies have reclaimed more than 7,000 square miles of territory.

The Italian-French-British forces, in their new drive now in progress on the Asiago plateau, have captured 5,000 prisoners in two days and made substantial gains of territory.

In Belgium the British-Belgian drive from Douai to Valenciennes has resulted in the recapture of all of the coal fields of Northern France except one small area of about five square miles near Escaut. The Germans are resisting very strongly between the Oise and the Selle Rivers, along the Hunding-Brunhilde line, which parallels their most important railway artery of communication running to Metz.

A great part of this resistance is being met by the American armies.

FURLOUGHS FOR U. S. GENERALS.

General March announced with a considerable show of pride that five of the American general officers, who have covered themselves with glory in the active operations, are to be given a well-earned rest in this country. They are Major-General S. Clarence R. Edwards, who has commanded the New England division; Major-General Omar K. Bundy, Major-General George Cameron, Major-General McMahon and Major-General Buck, the latter a winner of the distinguished service cross. General Bundy wil be given command of Camp Pike, General Edwards of the Depot Division at Camp Lee, General McMahon an artillery camp, while the places selected for the others have not yet been fully decided on.

General March explained that these officers, all old regular army men, had done their part and they now were needed in this country so that they could give the new armies the benefit of their experience. He also stated that Major-General Duncan, who was to have been invalided home, has fully recovered from his illness and has resumed his command on the western front.

LOCATION OF UNITS.

General March made the following locations of various units: 110th Field Artillery is in training; the 83d Division is a depot division; the 84th Division is just arrivng in France; the 313th Infantry is part of the 79th Division and is on the line east of the Meuse; the 58th Division is on the line east of the Meuse.

The 319th Infantry is part of the 80th Division and is on the line east of the Meuse; the 40th Division is a depot division; the 313th Field Artillery is part of the 80th Division on the line east of the Meuse; the 33rd Division is on the line east of the Meuse; the 322d Field Artillery is part of the 32d Division and is on the line between the Meuse and the Argonne; the 58th Infantry was in action on the Vesle during August; the 106th Infantry participated in the British drive against Cambrai as did the 104th, 105th and 106th Machine Gun battalions.

The 105th Field Artillery is part of the 33rd Division on the line east of the Meuse; the 57th Coast Artillery brigade is with the first army; the 53rd pioneers are at Belle Fontaine and the 79th Division is fighting east of the Meuse.

"Too Many Boches Here," Declared Kaiser's Son

By International News Service.

With the British Army on the Western Battle Front, Oct. 26.—Residents of the Belgian city of Bruges tell many stories of the Kaiser's son, Prince Adalbert, who was often in the city and who was always speaking in English instead of German.

On one occasion he entered a public dining room, and, finding it filled with German officers, he turned to his companion and said in English:

"There are too many boches here," whereupon he engaged a private room.

PROGRESS MADE BY YANKS

By BERT FORD,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

With the American Army Northwest of Verdun, Oct. 26—(1 p. m.).—American troops progressed slightly during the morning from the region of d'Ormont wood, despite heavy resistance.

The Americans captured a German order instructing the troops that the Americans must be stopped in their present positions and thrown back at any cost.

Last night there were feeble German counter-attacks north of Bantheville, which were repulsed. We are now holding firmly the ridge in the southern entrance to Burgundy woods. The weather is misty.

The Germans are stubbornly defending their positions north of Grand Pre, barricaded behind a stone rampart that was evidently erected centuries ago. It lies across a slight

TWO MILE GAIN BY FRENCH

By International News Service.

Paris, Oct. 26.—All German resistance has been broken over a wide front east of Laon, and at some points the French have advanced nearly two miles, the War Office announced today. Powerful German positions, which the Germans fortified throughout 1917, were taken. The French now hold Mortiers. The text of the communique follows:

"There was violent artillery activity during the course of the night between the Oise and Serre rivers. We are maintaining fighting contact with the enemy everywhere.

"During hard fighting we captured Mortiers and a number of prisoners.

"East of Souche the enemy reacted violently and there was stern fighting

BULLETINS!

Zurich, Oct. 26.—Preparations for the demobilization of the Austro-Hungarian armies are said to be already in progress. The Neues Journal of Vienna says Prince Frederick Lobkowitz and Baron Nadherny have left for Switzerland on an important mission. Both are strongly anti-German.

Paris, Oct. 26.—French, British and Serbian forces are driving the Austro-Germans northward on the whole front between Kralievo and Parachin, forty-five miles, the War Office announced today. French patrols have crossed the Danube River and invaded Rumania near Lom Palanka.

London, Oct. 26.—The German war cabinet has decided not to answer President Wilson's latest note, but to leave it to the entente powers to state the terms of an armistice, said a Central News dispatch from Zurich today.

Germany Will Yield on Alsace, Says Dr. Solf

London, Oct. 26.—An Amsterdam dispatch received here today quotes Dr. Solf, the German Foreign Secretary as announcing in the Reichstag that Germany is ready to yield the question of Alsace-Lorraine to peace negotiations. The Foreign Secretary added:

"It is our intention to fulfil President Wilson's program loyally, with complete justice and fairness, in all directions and on

He declared, however, that the government emphatically repudiated any suggestion reflecting on the honesty of its intention to carry out the fourteen points laid down by the American President in his peace program.

"The government has taken its stand on the President's message and is determined to act accordingly," he said.

GEN. EDWARDS COMING HERE FOR REST

New England Coommander, However, Will Help Train Armies in Real Warfare

Major-General Clarence R. Edwards, commander of the New England 26th) Division, which has made itself highly honored for its glorious work at the western front, is coming home. General Edwards came to Boston from the Panama Canal, and took charge of the Department of the Northeast, relinquishing that command to take the 26th Division overseas.

Word that the beloved veteran commander of the Twenty-sixth will soon return to this country was given out by General March at Washington, who explained that not only was his return for the purpose of enjoying a well-earned rest, but also because he is needed here to give the new armies being prepared the benefit of his experience.

General Edwards on his return will be given command of the depot division at Camp Lee.

TURKS ARE READY TO GIVE UP

Report They Have Formally Made Offer of Capitulation to Allies

Paris, Oct. 26.—Turkey has formally applied to the entente powers for peace, according to dispatches reaching here from Basle today. The bid was handed to the British and French ministers to Switzerland by the Turkish envoy to that country. It is reported to practically amount to an offer of full surrender.

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, Oct. 26.—That the German war cabinet recognizes the serious situation confronting its armies is best indicated, officials said today, by the decision of that body to await the decision of the allies on the armistice question before replying to President Wilson's note. It is not believed that it will have long to wait.

HUNGARY TO DEMAND IMMEDIATE PEACE.

Berne, Oct. 26.—Count Karolyi, in a statement today, intimated that, following a conference last night by Hungarian officials, it was decided to ask for immediate peace, said a dispatch from Budapest. The German alliance was denounced, the dispatch added, and declarations were made in favor of the independence of Hungary, woman suffrage, and the re-establishment of the national Hungarian council.

the United States and the entente already are in conference in France. They have had before them the tentative program passed upon by the Versailles war council and the British Admiralty authorities.

This program will be materially strengthened, officials here believe, before it is sent to the allied premiers for approval and transmission to President Wilson, who will in turn pass it back to Germany. It will be in Berlin, unless some unexpected obstacle presents itself, not later than the end of next week.

Meanwhile, the internal political situation in Germany constantly grows more critical. The demand for the immediate abdication of the Kaiser, fathered by the extreme Socialists, is being voiced from every quarter of the empire. So far there has been no notice taken of this "lese majeste" by the authorities, but it is generally believed here that they will have to take steps to end this agitation and that this action will precipitate a conflict that will have far reaching effects.

JUNKERS' LAST STAND.

The Junkers and the military party are calling on all "loyal Germans" to gather around them and announce a "resistance to the death" program. The Socialists and the workers in the industrial centres are planning a general strike to compel the immediate ending of the war on the best terms possible. No one here can forecast which proposition will be successful.

The situation admittedly is charged with dynamite and the official reports reaching Washington are so conflicting as to be almost worthless in aiding in reaching a conclusion as to what to expect.

That the authorities are extremely apprehensive of a coup d'etat by the radicals is indicated by the report that they have armed the Boy Scouts in big industrial centres, including the shipping cities and manufacturing communities, with machine guns and placed them under the direct command of the police authorities. The boys are to aid the elderly policemen in putting down any riots that may follow declaration of threatened strike.

WOMEN DEMAND PEACE.

Diplomatic dispatches reaching here today told of processions of women in some German cities who carried banners demanding peace. These dispatches emphasized the greeting that was given Dr. Karl Liebknecht, Socialist leader and former member of the Reichstag, on his release from prison where he has been confined since 1916 on a charge of attempting treason in connection with the "May day riots" of 1916. He is reported to have summoned a conference of the Socialist leaders to determine a program that will force an early peace.

But regardless of what may develop in connection with the diplomatic situation there will be no letup whatever in the military measures being pressed by the United States and the allies. The overseas movement of troops continues up to the average, military officials say, despite the ravages of Spanish influenza throughout the country. If the military party regains control in Germany and decides to fight on, the leaders will find that Field Marshal Foch has anticipated that possibility and continued his hammering on all fronts.

ITALIANS A BIG FACTOR.

The movement against the Austro-Hungarian forces on the northern Italian battle front between the Brenta and Piave Rivers is expected to aid the peace movement in Austria. The Italians have the benefit in this offensive of British and French veterans, and their success already is remarkable when the extremely difficult terrain over which they are fighting is considered.

Officials here say that the crisis in Austria's internal affairs cannot be deferred much longer. There is no confirmation here of the Italian reports that Emperor Charles has declared his intention of abdicating, but all of the dispatches from Rome, Basle, and Scandinavian sources emphasizes the seriousness of the revolts in Hungary, where the army apparently is seizing strategic cities in an effort to force an immediate peace on any terms obtainable.

YankeesTake 20,000 Prisoners in One Month's Fighting

By BERT FORD.

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

With the Americans, Northwest of Verdun, Oct. 25 (Night).—Tomorrow marks the completion of a month of fighting since the Americans started their drive on the front between the Argonne forest and the Meuse River. It was the first American major operation in the war, since the combats on the St. Mihiel salient and previously were of a local nature.

The present engagement, which history will probably call the battle of the Argonne, has seen the Americans fire 2,500,000 rounds of artillery ammunition and often as high as 150,000 rounds in a day.

They are using guns of all calibre, exclusive of the cannon captured from the Germans and turned back upon the foe.

Four hundred and seventy-five square kilometers of ground have been taken from the enemy and more than 20,000 prisoners, including many officers.

A vast quantity of enemy ammunition has been captured.

The booty includes much war material of all kinds, and many small arms and machine guns in countless numbers. Also, it includes much railroad equipment and locomotives, as well as freight and passenger cars.

During the month of fighting 230 German airplanes and twenty-three balloons were shot down.

Statistics and territory captured do not begin to tell the real story of American valor and achievements. In the face of stubborn resistance by forty divisions of picked troops the Americans forced their advance through a maze of artillery and machine guns in wooded, mountainous country which gave the Germans the advantage of natural defensive barriers.

Not only did the topography impede the Americans, but the Germans had also massed every modern piece of war machinery at their command in an effort to check the Yankees.

The Germans have been defending a pivot position on this part of the front and the Americans have been compelled to fight for every inch of ground gained.

In addition to the natural obstacles, the Yankees had to face five wonderfully organized and closely-knitted lines of defences. But American pluck and tenacity won and the defences were penetrated up to the Freya line, against which the Yankees are pressing.

First there was the Hindenburg line, then the Hagen line, third the Volker line, and next the Kriemhilde system. When the United States forces burst through the Freya line they will menace one of the only two lateral lines of railways over which the enemy has been carrying men and supplies into France.

on the outskirts of Caumomnt. All of our positions remained intact and all the German counter-strokes were repulsed. Late yesterday the battle continued between Sissonne and Chateau Porcien.

"We broke the enemy's resistance and captured strong positions which were reinforced throughout 1917.

"On a front of four and one-half miles we carried by storm all the enemy's positions, penetrating nearly two miles a tsome points between Bannogne and Recouvrance and in the region of Conde.

"We captured the mill at Herp and secured a number of additional prisoners and much war material.

"There was no change elsewhere on the front."

British Capture Four More Towns in Advance Flanking Vallenciennes

By International News Service.

London, Oct. 26.—ressing forward on a wide front on both sides of Valenciennes, the British have captured Mont Carmel, Englefontaine, Odomez and Maulde, the War Office announced today. A number of prisoners were taken. The text of the official report says:

"Early this morning we carried out a successful local minor operation on the borders of Mormal forest, capturing the hill known as Mont Carmel and the village of Engel Fontaine along with a number of prisoners.

"Farther north our patrols made progress at certain points north of the Les Quesnoy-Valenciennes railway.

"Determined counter-attacks were launched by the enemy yesterday evening against our positions on the railway northeast of Maing. The attackers were met by troop of the Fifty-first division with the bayonet and repulsed. Heavy losses were inflicted.

"Our line has been advanced between Valenciennes and Tournai.

"We have again made progress and captured the villages of Odomez and Maulde."

GAIN GROUND IN FLANDERS.

The British have overcome the strong resistance of the Germans on the Flanders front, have resumed their advance, and are now marching upon Ghent, said an earlier report from Paris today.

A new allied attack was begun on the Belgium front on Friday and excellent progress was made. The blow fell between the Lys River and the Scheldt, and the British War Office early today announced important captures, despite desperate resistance.

The text of the official report follows:

"British and French troops attacked between the Lys River and the Escaut (Scheldt) yesterday morning.

"The French captured Chateau Zulte and, despite the desperate resistance, reached Blawpoort farm on the Waereghem-Ansegem road.

"The British captured Engeghem and Ooteghen and are advancing on the Scheldt River in that section."

RAILWAY LINE CUT.

British troops have crosed and cut the Valenciennes Le-Quesnoy railway.

This railway was one of the most important lines of communication supplying the German army in Northern France.

Mounted British patrols have reached the outskirts of Le-Quesnoy, a German base.

The British second army, which attacked in conjunction with the French on the Flanders front, is still advancing and has captured Moen and probably Seesteert.

The advance was carried out in the face of heavy shelling but there was little machine gun fire.

The enemy seems to have made another retirement.

Austrio-Hungarians Offer Stiff Resistance to Italian Advance

By International News Service.

Rome, Oct. 26.—The Austro-Hungarian army on the Piave River is putting up extremely strong resistance against the Italians, the War Office reports. Three hundred more prisoners have been captured. There is heavy artillery duelling between the Piave and Brenta Rivers. The War Office report follows:

"Betwen the Piave and the Brenta there is fierce artillery firing.

"The enemy made counter-attacks, which were without success.

"There has been lively fighting in the Asolone-Pertica sectors, where where the enemy's resistance was very strong.

"Three hundred more prisoners were captured.

"Along the Piave the situation is unchanged."

Italian Cavalry in Balkans Reaches Bulgarian Frontier

Pershing Tells How Yankees Gain in Spite of Terrific Enemy Fire

Washington, Oct. 26. — American troops have continued to advance in the face of desperate resistance and on the Verdun front. After violent fighting the Americans have enlarged their gains, General Pershing reported to the War Department today in his communique for October 25. The communique also gives details of the battle in which the Americans were forced from the eastern part of the Belleau woods.

It was not until after the Germans had launched three furious assaults that the Americans gave ground, being forced to withdraw on the fourth after fighting that continued throughout the day.

The text of the communique follows:

"On the Verdun front the battle has continued with violence east of the Meuse. Late yesterday our troops enlarged their important gains south of Consenvoye-Damvillers road and occupied completely the Bois de Ormont. Today the enemy counter-attacked repeatedly and with strong forces on the front from Bois de Ormont to the Bois de Etrayes.

"Although supported by violent artillery and machine gunfire, his attacks were repulsed with extremely heavy losses. Only in the Bois Belleau did he succeed in slightly pushing back our line. At this point, after three assaults had failed before the stubborn resistance of our troops, the fourth attack forced us to withdraw from the eastern part of the woods.

"Hostile forces which attempted to penetrate our positions northwest of the Boise Belleau were driven back after a severe struggle, lasting throughout the day.

"West of the Meuse our troops advanced in the fact of determined resistance on the slopes northwest of Grand Pre and have entered the southern portion of the Bois de Bourgogne."

of dollars a year. I like to examine its details and find out whether or not it is properly drawn and within reason. As a matter of fact, in this particular case the Democratic House committee reduced the amount from $10,000 to $5,000, and it took every effort of a united Senate to restore the amount to $10,000."

READY TO PROVE CHARGE.

Senator Weeks said that the charge could not be substantiated. Former Governor Walsh says that it can be substantiated. He says that it can be proven from the records, and that he is prepared to submit the proof to Senator Weeks that the charge is true. Therefore, he has demanded that the Senator meet him face to face and attempt to justify his senatorial record.

The former Governor's letter follows:

Boston, Oct. 26, 1918.

Hon. John W. Weeks, Newton, Mass.:

My dear sir—You are quoted in the Boston newspapers this morning as stating in a speech at Quincy last night that the war risk insurance bill as it came from the House provided only a maximum limit of $5,000 insurance which might be taken by our soldiers to protect their families, and that the amount was raised to $10,000 in the Senate.

The Congressional Record of October 4, 1917, shows that the limit was fixed at $10,000 by almost a unanimous vote of the House, and that when the bill reached the Senate a committee amendment was recommended reducing the amount to $7,500. Upon a roll-call vote upon this amendment to reduce the amount on October 4, 1917, you and fifteen other senators voted in favor of the reduction. Forty senators voted against the reduction, and the amount remained at $10,000, as fixed by the House.

I shall submit to the newspapers of the State a photographic copy of Page 848 of the Congressional Record Oct. 4, 1917, showing that you voted in favor of the reduction.

CALLS FOR DEBATE.

Now, in order that you may have ample opportunity to make denial or explanation of any matters affecting your public record, I am prepared to meet you in public debate in one or more meetings to be held at Boston, Worcester or Springfield the coming week.

This is but one of many matters upon which I have at hand proof of your failure to support the government in its preparation for and conduct of the war and of the fact that you have consistently defended the great interests against the plain people.

The time is limited and in public debate you will have instant opportunity to justify your action to the people and to reply to me face to face in the most effective way. I shall bring to any meetings arranged copies of the Congressional Record, which are the proof of my assertions. Massachusetts has a right to demand that you give an account of your stewardship and I am only desirous that the truth and the whole truth shall be known.

Very truly yours,
DAVID I. WALSH.

PHELAN GIVEN RANK OF FIRST LIEUTENANT

Boston Man, Acting Paymaster off 101st in France, Is Promoted

By THOMAS F. PHELAN.

Camp Devens, Oct. 26.—It is now First Lieutenant Francis X. Phelan, acting paymaster of the 101st Overseas Regiment. He is a nephew of James J. Phelan, the Boston banker, and member of the State Public Safety Committee. Word of Lieutenant Phelan's promotion reached here today. His Boston friends in camp were gratified to hear of his elevation and predicted that he will be a captain within a month.

Bert Ford, who covered this camp for the AMERICAN and now war correspondent for the International News Service, writes a glowing account of Lieutenant Phelan's exploits under fire in France. The letter is addressed to a friend here.

"I saw Lieutenant Phelan astride a horse hurrying through a field swept with German machine gun fire on an errand of mercy," writes Ford.

Lieutenant Phelan was a member of the First Corps of Cadets and left that command to join the old "Fighting Ninth" regiment, commanded by Colonel Edward L. Logan, and went to France with that organization when it was joined with several other Massachusetts regiments and became the 101st. He is a son of the late Patrick M. Phelan of the firm of Phelan & Steptoe.

When the regiment took part in the battle at Chateau Thierry several months ago young Phelan was a top sergeant and displayed such deeds of valor that he was given special mention by his superiors. It was after this engagement that he was elevated to the rank of second lieutenant.

ELLA FLAGG YOUNG DIES OF GRIP

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 26.—Patriotic self-sacrifice as a member of the National Woman's Committee of the Liberty Loan led to the death of Mrs. Ella Flagg Young, noted woman educator and former superintendent of Chicago schools, from influenza today in her Washington apartments.

It was while she was engaged in the Fourth Liberty Loan drive two weeks ago in Idaho, Wyoming, Utah and Colorado that Mrs. Young was stricken with influenza at Cheyenne, Wyo., after delivering an address there. She returned to Washington, where she had since been ill at the Chatham Courts, 1731 Columbia road.

Mrs. Ella Flagg Young was born in Buffalo, January 15, 1845, and after graduating from the Chicago High School attended the University of Chicago, getting from that institution the degree of doctor of philosophy. She had been engaged in teaching since 1862, and continued her profession after her marriage to William Young in 1868. As superintendent of schools at Chicago, she was one of the highest salaried women of the United States.

Previous to being made superintendant of schools she had been professor of education at Cicago University, and principal of the Chicago Normal School. In 1910 Mrs. Young attended the convention of the National Education Association in Boston and at that time was honored by being elected president of the association.

NEW SERVICE Y. M. C. A. BOOKS SINGING PROGRAM

The new Boston Army and Navy Y. M. C. A. at City square, Charlestown, which was opened last Spring for the soldiers and sailors, is entering on a new departure of Sunday afternoon "get together" and "sing songs" for the enlisted men only.

The first one will be Sunday afternoon, and the principal speaker will be Chaplain Moore of one of the battleships, together with special music which has been arranged. Refreshments will be served.

Mrs. C. P. Curtis, Jr., is chairman of the committee on arrangements for these entertainments. Acting with her as hostess are Miss Ruth Thayer, Mrs. Clarence Mitchell, Miss Frances Bradley, Mrs. McKitterick and Mrs. Edward Pickman.

Bernhardt, on 74th Birthday, Is Star Court Witness

New York, Oct. 26.—Mme. Sarah Bernhardt celebrated her seventy-fourth birthday by going to court for a preliminary examination in her damage suit against the Pullman Company. She is suing for $75,000, alleging that she took a cold last Spring because of a defective heating apparatus in a car.

With characteristic gestures and display of emotion, she sparred with lawyers for the defendant, through an interpreter. She testified that she began her tour at Lawrence and ended it in a New York hospital, where an operation was necessary.

Asked for dates, she answered: "I never, never remember dates and occasions. You may as well ask me the color of the hair of the manager."

Her physician, Dr. Marot, who has been with her for eight years, prescribed for her, Mme. Bernhardt testified. Asked what he gave her, she answered: "I do not inscribe in bronze everything the doctor orders."

RADIO ELEVEN AFTER FOURTH VICTORY

Students Certain Unbeaten Idols Will Best Bumkin Island Team

U. S. Naval Radio School, Cambridge, Oct. 26.—Radio school students were confident today that victory would be their lot when the final score was announced at the Bumkin Island-Radio football game at Harvard Stadium.

Radio boosters base their confidence on the fact that Radio football eleven is unbeaten in any scheduled game this season. Added to that not a single score has ben chalked up against the speedy "buzzing" aggregation.

And, they go further to point out that the snappy "dit-da-dits" have piled up a total score of ninety-two against their opponents—an average of thirty-two points to the game.

In their last game with Hingham, the teams were of even weight, man for man, and the final score was 48 to 0 in favor of Radio.

Radio boosters today stated they were ready to back their eleven against any college or naval or army football team in the country. And, they added, confidently, "We'll trim 'em, too."

Clear, cool weather was on the schedule for today's game. A large gathering of oval enthusiasts was expected to be on hand.

EXPECT GERMAN FLEET TO GIVE BATTLE

By D. M. EDWARDS,

International News Staff Correspondent.

A port in Scotland, Oct. 26.—The German high seas fleet is expected to dash out momentarily by American and British naval officers. The Grand Fleet must come out within the next month or delay its operations until Spring.

According to the opinions of officers, Admiral Beatty has been quoted as saying that he was certain that the German fleet would come out from its refuge for battle.

An American naval officer was quoted as saying that the German fleet would have to come out during the next month or stay in its haven until Spring.

The German Admiralty has made every effort and used every opportunity to build up the navy, the American added.

How to Prevent infection from SPANISH INFLUENZA
The Surgeon General of the U. S. Army urges you to keep the mouth clean. This dreaded disease is taken into the system through the nose and mouth. Keeping the mouth and throat clean isn't simply using a tooth brush and ordinary dentifrice, but means a thorough, efficient mouth cleansing. A few drops of LIQUID Sozodont
in a half glass of water forms a foaming, bubbling mouth wash that is highly antiseptic, cleanses thoroughly, and renders pernicious germs harmless. This tried and true preparation will not entirely prevent Spanish Influenza, but it will prove a wonderfully potent preparation for preventing its infection, by keeping the mouth and throat clean and healthy.
Sozodont, with sixty years' success back of it, will eliminate tiny food deposits, keep the teeth white and attractive, neutralize the mouth acids and strengthen the gums.

10,000 Relatives of Soldiers to Appear in Greatest Motion Picture

"SMILES ACROSS THE SEA," the greatest motion picture undertaking in the world, will be staged in Boston beginning Wednesday, October 30, at 3 p. m. A gathering of 10,000 relatives of soldiers overseas is expected.

The Parade-ground on Boston Common, near Charles street, has been selected for the first installment of Boston's part of the 1,000-reel movie. Other sections of the country have already been filmed.

By special arrangement with the United States Committee on Public Information, the hundreds of reels of moving pictures of relatives of our fighting forces will be shown behind the lines in France and Belgium.

Families and sweethearts of boys "over there" will march in dress parade before the clicking camera and be reproduced "as big as life" in the films sent overseas.

This is a personal invitation to all relatives of soldiers overseas living in Wards 5, 6, 7 and 8 under the jurisdiction of Draft Divisions 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8, to come to the Common next Wednesday and be "taken" by the Hearst movie-man, who will make the first Boston films in the big serial. Relatives residing in the North, South and West Ends and the Back Bay are included in the above invitation.

Read the daily AMERICAN for further details, and watch for the announcement of your district.

There will be NO CHARGE to the relatives of fighters for this opportunity to send their smiles of encouragement 3,000 miles to the frontiers of freedom. William Randolph Hearst will assume all costs and all responsibility as a patriotic duty.

SOLDIERS' RELATIVES are asked:

To WEAR THEIR BEST, so that they will look comfortable.

To SMILE, so that they will look happy.

To BRING THE BABIES, so that their fathers can see how they are.

"Close-ups" will be made of the babies born since their fathers went to the front.

REMEMBER that our SLOGAN is GOOD CHEER, and that this message can only "get across" through your co-operation.

In case of rain the pictures will be made the next day at the same time and place.

U. S. MINES HAMPER VIPERS

Loss of Belgian Ports, Too, Is Serious Blow to Operations of Undersea Craft

Daily the trials and troubles of the German U-boat game increases.

It was noted, of course, that the latest Teuton peace plea included an assurance that orders had been dispatched to all submarine commanders "precluding the torpedoing of passenger ships," so far as Berlin could get word to the U-boat commanders in time.

But U-boating has already been struck some severe blows by the following allied operations:

1—Laying of a mine barrage by the American Navy 250 miles long, from the coast of Scotland to Norway.

2—Allied occupation of Ostend and Zeebrugge, the big U-boat bases on the Belgian coast, and of Bruges. The latter place was, through its canal connection with Zeebrugge, the chief centre of the submarine campaign in the North Sea.

HARBOR TOO SMALL.

An immediate result of the loss of Ostend, Zeebrugge and the U-boat basin at Bruges is emphasized by a recent despatch from Geneva saying that Kiel harbor was unable to hold all the submarines which had returned from Ostend and Zeebrugge during the week preceding and that some of the sea-divers were forced to remain off-shore for lack of harbor room.

The mine barrage placed by the American Navy from the north coast of Scotland across to Norwegian waters consists of thousands of mines loaded with T. N. T. (Trinitrotoluol.) A delayed despatch from the Scottish port this week described the mine field as so thickly sown that a rowboat could scarcely penetrate the barrage.

PLACED BY U. S. NAVY.

The feat of placing this mine field was accomplished by the American Navy. The mines were transported and assembled by Americans. Units of the British Navy aided much in the work, but the bulk of the perilous task of laying the mines was handled by Americans.

If, as described, this mine field forms an effectual barrier to U-boats across the upper gateway of the North Sea, it will leave the tortuous lane through the English Channel as the only U-boat exit from the North Sea proper. It would mean that the U-boats at Cuxhaven, Bremerhaven, Kiel and other submarine centres would have to take the longer and more roundabout way from Kiel through the Baltic Sea and up around Denmark.

The spectacular feat of the British Navy in blocking, or partially blocking, the harbors of Ostend and Zeebrugge last April was one of the most thrilling chapters in the maritime phase of this war.

Zeebrugge was the major objective. A German officer is quoted as having said:

"When we have evacuated Zeebrugge, but not until then, you may know that the invasion of England has been abandoned."

CONNECTS WITH BRUGES.

Zeebrugge is a small sea village on the Belgian coast, about four miles north of Ostend. Its harbor was protected by a breakwater or mole 800 yards long and equipped with warehouses and railroad tracks. From Zeebrugge to Bruges, a distance of only seven and one-half miles, runs the Maritime Canal, making an inland harbor out of Bruges. The canal is 230 feet wide and 26 feet deep.

Under cover of darkness the British sent old cruisers, loaded with cement, into Ostend and Zeebrugge harbor entrances and sunk them. Two of these blockade vessels were sunk at Ostend and two at Zeebrugge. The piling of Zeebrugge mole was destroyed by an obsolete submarine loaded with explosives.

Berlin declared that the British feat was more spectacular than effective in result and that the U-boat exits were not fully blocked.

FOE SINK VESSELS.

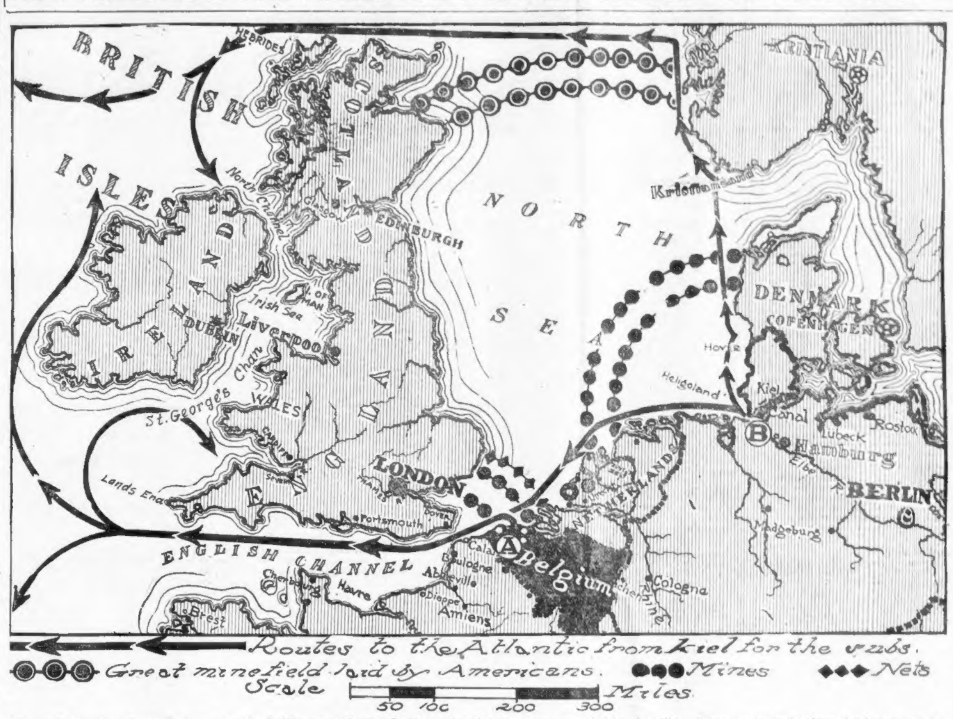
It became understood later that, while the blockading, concrete-filled vessels did not rest in the U-boat fairways, enough room was left or finally made by German engineers for the sea-vipers, by delicate navigation, to twist a passage in and out.

The big basins at Bruges have given accomodations to as many as two score U-boats, according to war correspondents. At the Bruges Arsenal repairs were made on the submersibles.

Correspondents entering Bruges with the allied advance in West Flanders found the sea-snakes gone from the inland nest, as a matter of course.

Three torpedo boats, sunk to prevent their being captured by the allies, projected their stacks above the water. It was reported that two submarines had been sunk in one of the Bruges outer basins for the same reason.

HOW AMERICANS AND ALLIES ARE BLOCKING GERMAN RUTHLESSNESS



(A) Indicates Ostend and Zeebrugge on the Belgian coast, former German submarine bases, now occupied by the allies. Bruges, a few miles from Zeebrugge and Ostend and the centre of distribution for the German submarine campaign around England, also fell in the great drive. Formerly the small type of submarines with a radius of from 2500 to 3000 miles under cover of the big land guns of Ostend and Zeebrugge and accompanied by mine sweepers could clear into the Straits of Dover through the congested mine fields. Then by feeling their way through the more open areas of mines in the English Channel the submarines, after a trip of 350 miles, would be in the Atlantic, ready for operations, with plenty of cruising radius for a trip into the Irish Sea and the return home.

(B) The Kiel Canal, now the base for all German submarines. From Kiel, skirting along the Danish and Norwegian coast, north to Scotland's tip, thence around to the west coast of Scotland and Ireland, is about 1,000 miles. This precludes the small submarines. So from Kiel can only operate the giant submarines of 10,000 miles or over radius, and there are few of them. To further cause nightmares for submarine captains, the American Navy has just laid an almost water tight barrage of T. N. T. mines from Scotland to Norway and the giant submarine that wiggles through this T. N. T. wall will probably not have the same luck on the trip home. With the great German guns of the Belgian coast gone, British mine layers now have clogged the entrance to the English Channel with mines and nets. Off Heligoland, from Denmark to the Netherlands, the first mine field bars the way.

SILENT HOUR ON RAILROADS AS TIME CHANGES

Trains scheduled to be on the road at 2 a. m. tomorrow, when the change in time goes into effect, will generally observe a "silent hour."

While they will depart and arrive on schedule time, they will actually be on the road an hour longer than usual.

This is because at 2 a.m. the hands of railroad timepieces will be set back an hour. In big stations, on sidings, wherever along the route is the most convenient stopping place, there will be a general tie-up of all traffic from two a. m., old time, until two a. m., new time—that is, one hour.

For example: Train No. 43 of the Boston & Albany road is due in Springfield at 1:55 a. m., and scheduled to leave at 2:10—a wait of fifteen minutes. Five minutes after its arrival tomorrow morning, the clock will be set back from two to one o'clock. The train will then wait until 2:10 a. m., new time—a wait in all of one hour and fifteen minutes, instead of fifteen minutes only.

The Federal Express, running between Boston and Washington, D. C., by night, will make a similar stop en route—probably, according to officials of the road, in the neighborhood of New Haven. Explicit directions will be given to engineers before departure of trains. The Federal Express from Washington is due here at 8.30 a. m., and the south-bound express leaves Boston at 7.30. Thus, both will be on the road when the change in time takes place.

Similarly, the midnight trains between Boston and New York, both ways, will make an hour's halt. In order to avoid confusion and the possibility of accident, special instructions will be issued by road officials where to make the stop. This applies to freight as well as passenger trains.

SLIGHT BRACE IN MARKET PRICES

There was some irregularity at the opening of the stock market in New York today, but the market was strong at the end of the first hour. Trading was in moderate volume, with prices fractionally higher in most issues. There was further improvement in the second hour.

Mexican Petroleum continued to recover, opening at 165; after dipping to 164 it rose to 172, up 9½ points. Marine preferred at 121⅛ was up 1⅝.

U. S. Steel opened at 109 and rose to 109⅞, up one point. Bethlehem B sold at 73, up ½, and Crucible Steel at 57¼, up ¼. Steel Foundries rose 1½ to 92½ and Baldwin Locomotive ⅞ to 85⅞.

Anaconda gained 1 at 70¾. Inspiration ⅛ at 54⅝ and Utah Copper lost ¼ at 88¼.

Reading after rising 1 to 91¼, sold 90½, up ¼; Southern Pacific advanced 1¾, to 102⅝; Union Pacific 1⅝, to 133⅝, and Northern Pacific ⅞, to 93¼.

Tobacco Products sold 76¼, up 1⅝; Studebaker 65½, up 2½; Distillers 49⅝, up ⅜; General Motors 133, up 4⅞, and U. S. Rubber 66¾, up 2.

American Can rose ⅝, to 44⅞; Corn Products was unchanged at 44.

Trading was quiet in Boston. Stewart was the most active stock. It rose from 32⅛ to 33, up 1; Boston & Maine gained ½, at 35; Swift & Company, 2½ at 112⅞; Punta Alegre Sugar, ⅝ at 49¾, and East Butte, ⅛ at 10⅝.

United Fruit at 142¾, United Shoe 43¼ and American Telephone 105¾ were off ¼ each.

U. S. Smelting 47½, Gorton-Pew 30¾ and Boston Elevated 72.

Closing: U. S. Steel, 110⅝; Bethlehem B, 72⅞; Crucible, 57; Baldwin, 85⅞; Mexican Petroleum, 175; Marine pfd., 121⅜; Anaconda, 71; Inspiration, 54½; Reading, 91⅜; Southern Pacific, 103⅞; N. Y. Central, 79¼; Union Pacific, 133⅝; Studebaker, 66; American Smelting, 90; U. S. Rubber, 67¾; American Can, 45¼; Pierce Arrow, 45.

In Boston: Stewart, 33⅛; U. S. Smelting, 47; Fairbanks, 58; Copper Range, 48⅝; Swift & Co., 114; Boston Elevated, 73½; American Telephone, 105½; Boston & Maine, 34½.

ZEEBRUGGE NOW BUT MASS OF RUINS

By JOHN T. PARKERSON,

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

With the British Army on the Western Battle Front, Oct. 26.—Picture Coney Island in ruins and deserted and one gets an idea of what Zeebrugge, until recently one of the most important German submarine bases, looks like.

The famous Zeebrugge lighthouse and all of the bridges and trolley lines have been wrecked.

The harbor is filled with ghastly blackened hulks of British destroyers at the entrance of the canal. The waterway completely stopped up.

The surrounding country, filled with oily water and pitted with shell holes, is covered with twisted wire and trenches. Here and there are great gun emplacements and many concrete "pill boxes" (cement blockhouses, with the walls ten feet thick). Off the port is the famous mole, where a British submarine was filled with explosives and sunk earlier in the war.

The mole is a sea wall which was built to prevent the Zeebrugge port from filling with sand.

CHILDREN CARRY KITS.

The only living souls in sight when I entered Zeebrugge were three Belgian peasants with packs on their backs, returning to their homes, and six Belgian priests, who were intent upon the examination of some wrecked buildings.

The great Solvay works were still intact, but the ground was strewn with wreckage of searchlights and burned and damaged supplies left by the Germans in their hurried flight.

(The Solvay works were used by the Germans for the manufacture of poison gases. It had previously been reported that they had been wrecked by the Germans before they retreated from the North Sea coast.)

The scene at Zeebrugge was in contrast with the happy picture of Bruges with its historic buildings. But while these buildings had not sustained damage the population had suffered.

On my way to Bruges I saw the roads lined with children carrying the kits of Belgian soldiers. Occasionally the parent or sweetheart of a soldier would meet up with a loved one and a pathetic scene would follow.

CAPTURE TWO GERMANS.

I saw two Germans who were caught hiding in the city. A great crowd had gathered about them and it was said that the day previous two others had been captured in the suburbs where they had been firing upon automobiles from a clump of bushes.

The great docks at Bruges had apparently been left undamaged by the Germans and great heaps of coal were found, which the Germans had been unable to carry away in their flight. The gardens were still filled with fresh vegetables.

The scene in Thorout yesterday was like the dawn of a new day. The rebuilding of the city had already begun and the population was rushing through the streets, happy, smiling and business-like. Some were busy plugging up broken windows and others were cleaning out their homes and shops.

The stores in Bruges suffered badly when the Germans left. The soldiers making up the rear guards smashed the windows and doors with the butts of their rifles and removed the valuables from the whole countryside.

In Menin and Zeebrugge many persons who had refused to comply with the German order to give up their wool mattresses were found in prison.

When the allied advance began on the Flanders front the Germans told the civilian population they were evacuating Belgium and that it would bring peace.

GRIP TAKES FRESH START AT CAMBRIDGE

A jump of 41 in the number of new cases of influenza worried Cambridge health officials, who cannot account for the sudden increase in epidemic figures. The report was one death and 47 new cases. For the previous 24 hours the record was no deaths and six new cases.

BRUGES, JOY-MAD, WILDLY CHEERS OWN TROOPS

By JOHN T. PARKERSON,

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

With the British Army on the Western Battlefront, Oct. 26.—Victorious Belgian cavalry passing through the historic city of Bruges was the first the residents had seen of their own troops since the Germans had left.

As the Belgians entered, bugles were blowing and the famous chimes were ringing. The people were beside themselves with joy over their liberation. A committee of aldermen received the International News Service correspondent in the great hall of the city building and presented the following message to the people of the United States:

"Bruges is happy to have this opportunity of receiving an American newspaper correspondent in order that the population may tell him how glad the town is for the assistance America has given in the way of provisioning and for the sympathy those great American people extend not only toward the residents of Bruges but all Belgians as well. The burgomaster and the aldermen express their warm thanks to the noble people of the United States."

GIRL PRISONERS FREED.

The committee brought in from an ante-room two young girls who had been imprisoned for six months because they had written letters to their brother outside of the prescribed three-mile zone. All they had to eat while in jail was moldy bran. The girls were told that their brother had been condemned to die because he had written to his sisters, but later they learned that he had only been imprisoned for six months.

The aldermanic committee preserved copies of all of the German orders, the most striking of which pertains to the death of Captain Fryatt, a British seaman. One order is dated October 1, 1918, and cautioned the people of Bruges to remain quiet. It said that the smallest riot or disorder would be answered by heavy artillery fire against the quarter where it originated.

All civilians were ordered to remain in their houses from six in the evening until six in the morning. Those found in the streets would be fired upon. In nearly all instances the orders prescribed death penalties for violations and were signed by "der Kommandant."

HERDED LIKE CATTLE.

All of Belgium was flooded with German money. Prices in the restaurants were about twice as high as those in France, but apparently the eating places that catered to the Germans were well supplied with meats, sugar and other essentials.

Alderman Van Hoestenberghe, official representative of Bruges at the execution of Captain Fryatt, declared that the British seaman died without saying a word.

(Fryatt was condemned to death and executed by the Germans because it was said that his merchant ship had rammed a German submarine.)

An order came from Germany rescinding the death penalty an hour after it had been carried out.

Posters signed by Admiral von Schroeder of the German navy were distributed in Belgium declaring that other sea captains who emulated the exploit of Captain Fryatt would be accordingly punished.

The Germans exacted from 15,000 to 20,000 marks in fines from residents of Bruges every month. Three persons were fined 1,000 marks each for not changing their clocks to correspond with German time. When tradespeople disobeyed German orders they were heavily fined, and their goods were confiscated.

PENALTY WAS DEATH.

A civilian who wore a pin with a picture of King Albert attached to it was imprisoned for twenty-six days. The death penalty was prescribed for those who had telephones in their homes, and persons were fined for speaking to allied prisoners of war.

The sale of all newspapers was prohibited except the German and two Dutch pro-German periodicals.

Two months ago the Germans marched 34 alleged Belgian deserters in the streets of Bruges and Ostend, creating an artificial ovation. The people did not believe that the men were Belgians, but that they were Germans dressed up in Belgian uniforms.

The Germans forced the Belgians to remove everything that was French and substitute German or Flemish. Even the signs on the streets and the letter boxes were changed. Admiral von Schroeder whipped children in the streets because their dogs barked at him.

REPRIEVE CAME TOO LATE.

The Germans requisitioned everything they wanted. Linen, silverware, pianos and even pictures were removed. All the brass and copper were carried off, and but one doorknob was left to each house.

The males between the ages of 16 and 46 were all carted off, packed like cattle in wagons. So closely filled were the vehicles that the Belgians could not even sit down.

The town of Nieuport was fined 10,000 francs for possessing British aerial propaganda.

The censorship was both strict and stupid. Civilians were not allowed to telegraph outside of their "zone," and violations brought the death threat.

WILL TRAIN FOR OFFICERS IN CALIFORNIA

Gen. Crozier Asks Citizens to Aid in Selecting Candidates for Camp Fremont

In a letter to mayors and selectmen of communities all over New England, Major-General William Crozier, commanding the Department of the Northeast, asks for the aid of responsible citizens in helping to choose men for the Infantry Officers' Training School to be opened December 1 at Camp Fremont, California. The New England quota for this camp is 1,220.

An officer charged with recruiting men for the training camp will visit every city and large town for this purpose. General Crozier asks that municipal authorities prepare a list of half a dozen names of responsible citizens, "free from strong partisanship," who will aid the visiting officer in the selection of candidates. In his letter, General Crozier says:

"You will understand, of course, that there is nothing concerning the large forces which the country is raising for the conduct of the war in Europe which is so important as the character and ability of the officers who are to command their various units, and I am sure that the leading citizens of your community will be willing to aid in their selection."

LET BOYS OVER THERE SEE YOU IN 'MOVIE'

Mothers, Sweethearts, If You Live Near the Common, Be There Wednesday

Miles of Smiles!

Literally—MILES OF SMILES!

Thousands of feet of movie film containing the beloved forms and smiling features of relatives of soldier boys now fighting on the frontiers of freedom are being made simultaneously throughout the United States to be shown at the social centres behind the lines in France.

Boston's first installment of the greatest movie serial in the world—a 1,000-reel feature picture—will be made on Wednesday, October 30, on the parade ground on Boston Common, beginning at 3 p. m.

All relatives of soldiers now in France who reside in the North, South and West Ends and in the Back Bay as far west as St. Mary's street, are hereby invited to gather on the big parade ground along the Charles street mall of the Common and appear in the Hearst moving picture at that time.

GET INTO THE PICTURE.

In other words, if you live in Wards 5, 6, 7 and 8, presided over by Draft Divisions 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8 you come within the scope of this sweeping invitation. The Boston AMERICAN invites every soldier's relative living in this territory to be filmed.

Fathers, mothers, sisters, brothers, sons, daughters, aunts, uncles, grandparents, wives and cousins are urged to take advantage of the opportunity of helping to make the boys in the trenches happy by sending them an animated, life-size photograph of themselves. Sweethearts, too, are welcome to be filmed along with the rest.

In answer to the many letters received by the AMERICAN from soldiers' relatives desiring to appear in the "smiles" movie, it is announced that the camera will take films of soldiers' relatives on three days a week at different Boston and suburban parks and playgrounds until all of Boston and certain suburbs are successfully filmed.

If you are not included in today's invitation, watch the daily columns of the AMERICAN for the announcement of your district and the time and place where the camera man will be stationed.

HEARST PAYS THE BILL.

Adequate areas in which to operate will be roped off by the park and playground superintendents where the pictures are to be made, and Superintendent Crowley of the Boston Police Department has promised that adequate police supervision will be furnished to facilitate the handling of the large crowds expected.

The tentative days set for the filming of Boston include every Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday during the coming six weeks. All pictures will be taken beginning at 3 p. m. on the dates set. If the weather is inclement Wednesday's pictures will be taken on Thursday, Saturday's pictures on Monday, and Sunday's film on the Tuesday following the advertised dates.

There is no expense connected with taking of the pictures. All costs and responsibility will be assumed by William Randolph Hearst and the International Film Service, Mr. Hearst's great moving picture organization. Mr. Hearst considers it a priviledge and a duty to be of service in such an inspiring undertaking.

SEND A GOOD CHEER MESSAGE.

Soldiers' relatives are only asked:

To wear their best, so that they will look comfortable.

To smile, so that they will look happy.

To bring the babies, so that their fathers can see how they are.

"Close-ups" will be made of the babies born since their fathers went to the front.

BOSTON AMERICAN MAN IS KILLED IN ACTION

Word has been received of the death in action of Gordon Mackman, a member of the 170th Battalion of the Canadian army, formerly of this city. Mr. Mackman was a printer and was employed in the composing room of the AMERICAN previous to enlisting. He was a crack soccer player, being a member of the St George Athletic Association team. Memorial services will be held in St. James Episcopal Church, St. James street, Roxbury, Sunday evening at 7:30.

GRIP VICTIMS are people who get weak and run down. You can gain fighting strength from FATHER JOHN'S MEDICINE

MANY LEFT OUT OF DOORS OVER NIGHT.

The unofficial foreigners remained in the station several hours, hoping that, at the last moment, they would be permitted to go. Bedri, however, was inexorable. Their position was almost desperate. They had given up their quarters in Constantinople, and now found themselves practically stranded. Some were taken in by friends for the night, others found accommodations in hotels. But their situation caused the utmost anxiety.

Finally, I succeeded in making arrangements for them to leave the following day. Bedri, in more complaisant mood, spent that afternoon at the embassy, viseing passports; we both went to the station in the evening and started the train safely to Dedeagatch.

There were still many who wished to go and next day I called on Talaat in their behalf. I found him in one of his most gracious moods. The cabinet, he said, had carefully considered the whole matter of English and French residents in Turkey, and, my arguments, he added, had greatly influenced them. They had reached the formal decision that enemy aliens could leave or remain, as they preferred. There would be no concentration camps, civilians could pursue their usual business in peace, and, so long as they behaved themselves, they would not be molested.

"We propose to show," said Talaat, "by our treatment of aliens, that we are not a race of barbarians."

In return for this promise he asked a favor of me; would I not see that Turkey was praised in the American and European press for this decision? I did so.

MORE ALARMING NEWS.

Hardly had I finished when I again received alarming news. I had arranged for another train that evening, and I now heard that the Turks were refusing to vise the passports of those whose departure I had provided for. This news, coming right after Talaat's explicit promise, was naturally disturbing. I immediately started for the railroad station, and the sight which I saw there increased my anger at the Minister of the Interior. A mass of distracted people filled the inclosure; the women were weeping, and the children were screaming, while a platoon of Turkish soldiers, commanded by an undersized popinjay of a major, was driving everybody out of the station with the flat side of their guns. Bedri, as usual, was there.

Certain of the passengers, he told me, had not paid their income tax, and, for this reason, they would not be permitted to leave. I announced that I would be personally responsible for this payment.

"I can't get ahead of you, Mr. Ambassador, can I?" said Bedri, with a laugh. From this we all thought that my offer had settled the matter and that the train would leave according to schedule. But then suddenly came another order holding it up again.

Since I had just had a promise from Talaat I decided to find that functionary and learn what all this meant. I jumped into my automobile and went to the Sublime Porte, where he usually had his headquarters. Finding no one there, I told the chauffeur to drive directly to Talaat's house. Sometime before I had visited Enver in his domestic surroundings and this occasion now gave me the oportunity to compare his manner of life with that of his more powerful associate. The contrast was a startling one. I had found Enver living in luxury, in one of the most aristocratic parts of the town, while now I was driving to one of the poorer sections.

CONTRAST WITH ENVER.

As contrasted with Enver's palace, with its innumerable rooms and gorgeous furniture, Talaat's house was an old, rickety, wooden, three-story building. All this, I afterward learned, was part of the setting which Talaat had staged for his career.

Amid these surroundings I awaited for a few minutes the entrance of the Big Boss of Turkey. In due time a door opened at the other end of the room and a huge, lumbering, gaily-decorated figure entered. I was startled by the contrast which this Talaat presented to the one who had become such a familiar figure to me at the Sublime Porte. It was no longer the Talaat of the European clothes and the thin veneer of European manners; the man whom I now saw looked like a real Bulgarian gypsy.

He came and sat down with a good-natured grin and began to make excuses. Quietly the door opened again and a hesitating little girl was pushed into the room, bringing a tray of cigarettes and coffee. Presently I saw that a young woman, apparently about twenty-five years old, was standing back of the child, urging her to enter. Here then were Talaat's wife and adopted daughter; I had already discovered that, while Turkish women never enter society or act as hostesses, they are extremely inquisitive about their husbands' guests, and like to get surreptitious glimpses of them.

TIME FOR PLAIN TALK.

"Well, Talaat," I said, realizing that the time had come for plain speaking, "don't you know how foolishly you are acting? You told me a few hours ago that you had decided to treat the French and English decently and you asked me to publish this news in the American and foreign press. I at once called in the newspaper men and told them how splendidly you were behaving. And this at your request! The whole world will be reading about it tomorrow. You might as well understand now that we can do no business with each other unless I can depend on your promises."

"Now, this isn't my fault," Talaat answered. "The Germans are to blame for stopping that train. The German chief of staff has just returned and is making a big fuss, saying that we are too easy with the French and English and that we must not let them go away. He says that we must keep them for hostages. It was his interference that did this."

That was precisely what I had suspected. Talaat had given me his promise, then Bronsaart, head of the German staff, had practically countermanded his orders. Talaat's admission gave me the opening which I had wished for. By this time my relations with Talaat had become so friendly that I could talk to him with the utmost frankness.

"Now, Talaat," I said, "you have got to have some one to advise you in your relations with foreigners. You must make up your mind whether you want me or the German staff. Don't you think you will make a mistake if you place yourself entirely in the hands of the Germans? The time may come when you will need me against the Germans."

"What do you mean by that?" he asked, watching for my answer with intense curiosity.

TALAAT PROMISES HELP.

"The Germans are sure to ask you to do many things you don't want to do. If you can tell them that the American ambassador objects, my support may prove useful to you. Besides you know you all expect peace in a few months. You know that the Germans really care nothing for Turkey, and certainly you have no claims on the allies for assistance. There is only one nation in the world that you can look to as a disinterested friend and that is the United States."

This fact was so apparent that I hardly needed to argue it in any great detail. However, I had another argument that struck still nearer home. Already the struggle between the war department and the civil powers had started. I knew that Talaat, although he was Minister of the Interior, and a civilian, was determined not to sacrifice a tittle of his authority to Enver, the Germans and the representatives of the military.

"If you let the Germans win this point today," I said, "you are practically in their power. You are now the head of affairs, but you are still a civilian. Are you going to let the military, represented by Enver and the German staff, overrule your orders? Apparently that is what has happened today. If you submit to it you will find that they will be running things from now on. The Germans will put this country under martial law, then where will you civilians be?"

I could see that this argument was having its effect on Talaat. He remained quiet for a few moments, evidently pondering my remarks. Then he said, with the utmost deliberation:

"I am going to help you."

He turned around to his table and began working his telegraph instrument. I shall never forget the picture; this huge Turk, sitting there in his gray pajamas and his red fez, working industriously his own telegraph key, his young wife gazing at him through a little window and the late afternoon sun streaming into the room.

CHRISTIANS THREATENED.

A piece of news at that moment over the wire almost ruined my case. After a prolonged thumping of his instrument, in the course of which Talaat's face lost its geniality and became almost savage, he turned to me and said:

"The English bombarded the Dardanelles this morning and killed two Turks."

And then he added:

"We intend to kill three Christians for every Moslem killed!"

For a moment I thought that everything was lost. Talaat's face reflected only one emotion—hatred of the English. Afterward, when reading the Cromer report of the Dardanelles, I found that the British Committee stigmatized this early attack as a mistake, since it gave the Turks an early warning of their plans. I can testify that it was a mistake for another reason, for I now found that these few strange shots almost destroyed my plans to get foreign residents out of Turkey. Talaat was enraged, and I had to go over much of the ground again, but finally I succeeded in pacifying him once more.

We remained there more than two hours, my involuntary host pausing now and then in his telegraphing to entertain me with the latest political gossip.

Finally the train was arranged. Talaat had shown several moods in this interview; he had been by turns sulky, good-natured, savage and complaisant.

"Your people can go now," he said with a laugh. "It's time to buy your candles, Mr. Ambassador!"

This latter, of course, was a reference to little gifts which I had made to the women and children the night before. We immediately returned to the station, where we found the disconsolate passengers sitting around waiting for a favorable word. When I told them that the train would leave that evening their thanks and gratitude were overwhelming.

CHAPTER XII.

THE INVASION NOTRE DAME DE SIO

Talaat's statement that the German Chief of Staff, Bronsaart, had really held up this train, was a valuable piece of information. I decided to look into the matter further, and, with this idea in my mind, I called next day on Wangenheim, who had repeatedly told me that the Germans were looking to President Wilson as the peacemaker. I therefore used the same argument with him that I had urged on Talaat. Proceedings of this sort would not help his country when the day of the final settlement came!

"What sort of an impression do you think that will make on the American people?" I asked Wangenheim. He expressed a willingness to help and suggested, as my consideration for such help, that I should try to persuade the United States to insist on free commerce with Germany, plentiful cargoes of copper, wheat, and cotton. This was a subject to which, as I shall relate, Wangenheim constantly returned.

I realized that, owing to my religion, there might be a feeling in certain quarters that I was not exerting all my energies in behalf of these Christian peoples and religious organizations—hospitals, schools, monasteries, and convents.

I had a long discussion on this matter with Pallavicini, himself a Catholic and the representative of the greatest Catholic power. Pallavicini frankly told me that Wangenheim would do nothing that would annoy the Turks.

Evidently Pallavicini wished me to believe that Wangenheim and he really desired to help. Yet this plea was hardly frank, for I knew all the time that Turkey, if the Germans had not constantly interfered, would have behaved decently.

I found that the evil spirit was not the Turkish government, but Von Bronsaart, the German Chief of Staff.

To be continued Monday in the Boston American.

THAT LONG LOST HOUR RETURNS TONIGHT

Scene, Anywhere in New England.
Time, Sunday morning, October 27, 6:10 a. m.

Old Sol speaks: Well, here I am again. Another day—what's this? There's one village clock says 6:10 and another says 7:10. Yesterday when I rose they all said 7:09. How can that be? Nobody's going to make me believe I got around in only twenty-three hours. It simply can't be done.

I remember last Spring they acted queerly—tried to make out it took me twenty-five hours to get around. Well, well, I suppose they'll be blaming it on the war. But they needn't think they can throw me off my schedule. Clocks may stop and clocks may go, but I go on forever.

The Rooster: Where's that grain? I've been up an hour longer than usual. They needn't think Old Sol and I are going to change our habits just because they change their old clocks. I don't care a cockle-doodle-doo what the clocks say; it's time for breakfast.

CAN'T GET 'EM UP.

The Weather Vane: Unusually quiet for this time of day. Is everybody oversleeping?

Alarm Clock: B-r-r-r-r! Time to get up.

Commuter: Drat you! Have you got the habit? Shut up. (Crash! Turns over and goes to sleep again.)

Little Johnny: Papa, it's time to let me get in bed with you and tell me a story.

Papa (growls): Go back to bed. It isn't morning yet.

The Cat: Here I've been scratching at this door for an hour. Aren't they going to let me out of the cellar today?

For tomorrow it's back to the old regime! Almanac time once more, and not Congress time.

Tomorrow everybody can sleep an hour longer. Tomorrow when you get up it will be lighter, and the sun will be higher, and the air will be warmer, than it was today.

Are you going to sit up tonight to see Mr. Wilson's time out and Nature's time come into her own again? Or are you going to set you timepieces back an hour before you go to bed, and put the cat out an hour earlier by the clock than usual? Or are you going to wait till morning and give old grandfather's clock a derisive ha-ha when she tolls the usual hour of rising?

GETTING BACK THAT HOUR.

All these methods are going to be in vogue between now and the time when you will prop up your Sunday paper against the coffee urn and butter your morning toast.

Also, at least three methods are going to be tried out of accommodating timepieces to the new order. Some are going to set their clocks and watches an hour back; some are going to put them eleven hours ahead; some are going to stop them for an hour and then start them going again. Last Spring the powers that pilot our great Ship of State played a mean trick on lazy people; they stole an hour right out of the night's sleep. But now they are going to put it back again. Tonight you may go to bed at eleven o'clock, and you may sleep until eight, and between those times you will get the hours' slumber—if you don't suffer from insomnia.

Little old Friend Sun, meantime, who has been right on the job with his well-known regularity, is going to find himself in a curious position. This morning he rose at 7:09, and tomorrow when he rises it will be only 6:10. Today he sets at 5:47 p. m. Tomorrow when he sets the clocks will say only 4:47 p. m. That is, they will say it if they haven't quit work altogether.

CLOCKS ARE SENSITIVE.

And we must be careful that they do not. Clocks are sensitive things, and must not be juggled roughly. Here are the directions given by Tiffany & Co., the famous New York jewelers, than whom no better authorities can be found.

The majority of timepieces that don't strike may be turned back an hour without injury. Striking clocks should be set forward eleven hours, striking at each hour. Pendulum clocks should be stopped for an hour and then set going again. Watches may in general be set back an hour. Repeaters should not be set back while the movement is striking. Clocks with calendar attachments should be stopped.

However you do it, remember one thing: your week end is going to be a whole hour longer than usual. So—pleasant dreams and a happy holiday.

IN TURKEY A WOMAN DOESN'T KNOW HER HUSBAND TILL AFTER SHE'S MARRIED, BUD!

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTS

WHY MENTION TURKEY ESPECIALLY, BRUNO?

N.E. BEHIND WAR WORK CARNIVAL

William F. Garcelon Chairman of Brilliant Committee Named to Run This District

By NICK FLATLEY.

Sports are to do their bit in Boston and New England to boom along the United War Work drive for $170,500,000. This section of the country will have a sport week that will make history hereabouts.

From November 9 until November 18, inclusive, every sport event in Boston and vicinity will be devoted to helping the seven organizations that make life happy for our boys in the service.

The New England committee of the united campaign has issued a call to the sport lovers to make the period a whirlwind. And the sporting fraternity, as is always the case in New England, is rallying round the colors with splendid enthusiasm.

Though the committee's request was made public only this morning, already clubs and schools and colleges are getting in touch with headquarters and offering their every effort to make the Sport Drive a success.

ALL TO DO BIT.

Every cent that is taken in at all New England sporting events during the Drive will go to the fund. That was the request of the committee, and with the local sport authorities such a request is equivalent to an order.

There will be big college football games; there will be contests between the nationally famous athletic heroes on the service outfits; there will be real, regular boxing shows, with the stars of the ring battling real battles; there will be track meets and wrestling shows, and swimming carnivals and billiard matches and everything like that.

New England's sport set is out to make the Big Drive tell the world that this neck of the woods is the best there is when it comes to a real showdown. Just as New England's boys are with the best of them over there, so New England's stay-at-homes will produce generously in the important matter of helping along the fighters.

All our local sport leaders and lovers will be doing real war work from now until the drive ends.

COMMITTEE WELL PICKED.

Already Nathaniel Young, physical director of the Boston schools, is lining up his youngsters so that athletically they can do their bit; Dr. A. E. Garland is getting ready the sport branches of all the Y. M. C. A.'s; George V. Brown and Hugh McGrath are aligning the club officials throughout the section.

Chairman William F. Garcelon is in communication with college and camp football authorities, preparing a schedule that will make followers of the gridiron pastime think of the good old days.

The complete New England committee, which has been authorized by the national body to make the Sport Drive a great success, follows:

William F. Garcelon, chairman; Edward E. Babb, B. A. A., vice-chairman; Chauncey W. Waldron, War Camp Community Service, secretary; Nathaniel Young, physical director Boston public schools; George V. Brown, First Naval District; Dr. A. E. Garland, Y. M. C. A.; Hugh McGrath, Boston Recreation and Health Department; O. L. Herbbert, Y. M. C. U.; Harry L. Ayer, former president Massachusetts Golfers' Association; Dr. George B. McGrath, president N. E. Rowing Association; Major Fred W. Moore, Harvard Athletic Association; Lieutenant William L. Prout, K. of C., former president of the N. E. A. A. U., now in service at Camp Dodge; Joseph B. Macrabe, now in service in Porto Rico, and Rufus D. Smith, War Camp Community Service.

PAT ANGUS IS ON DECK WITH HINGHAM ELEVEN

The Hingham Training Station eleven, which has been drilled all week by Simmy March, former New England leaguer and a member of the Red Sox under Patsy Donovan, was to battle the crack Headquarters' team from the Little Building on Tech Field, Brookline, this afternoon. Pat Angus, former Tufts captain; Charley Gately, ex-Waltham High captain, and Everett Buckman, old Colby star and All-Maine tackle, were Hingham's best bets. Play at 3 o'clock.

ALL WAR FUNDS ARE TO COLLECT FROM BASEBALL FUND

Chicago, Oct. 26.—Secretary of War Baker has advised B. B. Johnson, president of the American League, that the $16,634 donated to war charities from last month's World's Series receipts, will be divided among the Y. M. C. A., National Catholic War Council, Y. W. C. A., Salvation Army, American Library Association and War Camp Community Service.

"In acknowledging this gift I beg leave to assure the National Baseball Commission and the various persons and organizations which have contributed to it, of my cordial appreciation of their generous action," stated Secretary Baker in his letter to Johnson.

"The men of the army and navy, most of them undoubtedly enthusiastically interested in baseball as our national sport, will be glad to know that this gift for their use and pleasure has come from men whose names they know well and whose activities they watch with constant interest."

Naval Radio, with three straight victories to its credit, was expected to find hot opposition this afternoon in Harvard Stadium, where Bumkin Island, also with a clean slate, is calling on the Cambridge sailors.

The key-tapping wizards have been playing consistent football in the haunts of former world's champion Harvard elevens, and were out to preserve their clean record, for the traditions of the Stadium, if no other reason.

Cuddy Murphy, Dartmouth's All-New England star; Broderick, captain of last year's New Hampshire State College, et al., were rivals not to be treated too lightly, and Radio's aspirations for championship honors were to be tried sorely, it was expected.

Men in service will be admitted without charge; civilians will be called upon for 28 cents entrance fee.

GEORGIA TECH BATTLES A RED-HOT FOE TODAY

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 26.—Georgia Tech, who has scored 269 points against its opponents in its three games this Fall, Clemson, Furman and Fort Oglethorpe being its victims, was to clash with Camp Gordon here this afternoon. Everett Strupper, Tech's backfield star last year; Mt. Pleasant, Carlisle's old famous quarterback, and Beers, Dartmouth's former noted centre, were among the topliners carded to line up with the soldier eleven.

PENN GAME IS PLAYED BEHIND LOCKED GATES

Philadelphia, Oct. 26.—The Penn Marine game on Franklin Field this afternoon was to be played only for Penn students, who are members of the athletic association, and a contingent of marines, who came in a body from League Island.

The Dartmouth game, scheduled for November 9, will be played on Franklin Field and not at the Polo Grounds, New York, according to Manager Bushnell of Penn.

AMHERST AND WESLEYAN CLASH ON ANDRUS FIELD

Middletown, Ct., Oct. 26.—Amherst and Wesleyan, football rivals since 1886, were to meet on Andrus Field this afternoon. Of the twenty-three games played, Wesleyan has won fifteen and lost nine, one contest having ended in a tie. Captain Anderson and Boote were back in Wesleyan's lineup, while Newhall was carded to start the game at right end. Peck and Steele were to alternate at the pivotal position.

West Virginia Cancels Game.

Morgantown, W. Va., Oct. 26.—West Virginia has called off the game with Rutgers in New York, November 2, because it has been unable to practice since October 5 on account of the influenza ban.

FULLERTON'S COLUMN

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

There has been much discussion since the entry of the United States into the war as to whether or not our athletes have been doing their part.

The professional ballplayer has come in for most of the criticism. Beyond doubt, the percentage of professional players who have entered the fighting service is extremely small, although since baseball was stopped the "pros" have made a better showing.

Compared with our Canadian cousins in sports the United States makes a poor showing. Better still, the majority of the Canadian baseball players, hockey, soccer and lacrosse "pros" went as volunteers during the earlier days of the war.

In a recent review of the overseas service of Eastern Canada, it was shown that there are not enough hockey and soccer players on this side to organize teams.

CANADIANS HAVE DONE BIT.

Professional sport in Canada is practically wiped out until a new generation of players is developed, and the number of gold stars on service flags of the clubs, amateur and professional, is remarkable.

In one day's casualty lists last week two of the most famous Canadian soccer players that ever performed on this side of the line were reported killed in action.

These were John McBride, who lived in Toepka, Kan., and played soccer all through the Central West and who hastened back to Canada early in the war to go with his old friends; the other was Jack Cartwright, who, after playing on two Canadian championship teams, came to the States and made the Pullman, Ill., team famous.

STERLING HONOR LIST.

He, too, went back to Canada early in the war, although not compelled to serve, and enlisted. He died in an attack on Lille, and although his older brother, Chris, who still remains with the Pullmans, does not know how, it is safe to wager that he was rushing the ball straight at the goal and was playing forward.

They do some things better (at least more thoroughly) up there in the White country than we do. For instance, in baseball, soccer, hockey and lacrosse, the great games over the border, they are keeping accurate lists of all the players, where they are and what they are doing.

They are listing all the athletes who have gone across, and also all those who still remain at home, and they know just why each man staid at home. In other words, they'll know who's who and why after the war.

On this side there are liable to be mistakes. Some players will be subjected to severe criticisms who perhaps have valid reasons for not being in the ranks. In Canada there will be no guess work.

There is a list of fifty-eight hockey players, Canadian born or by adoption, who were playing in the United States at the start of the war. All save fourteen went back and into the ranks.

COMPARISON A POOR ONE.

Of the fourteen at least ten are above military age or incapacitated by old strains and injuries. So far as I can find there were only twenty-six Canadians playing baseball in the States, and seventeen of them are serving with the colors.

The majority of the professional players with the Canadian teams at the start of the war were Americans from this side of the line. I have a list of nine American-born players who went into the Canadian armies before the United States got into the scrap.

This showing of the Canadians rather makes our athletes look slack by comparison.

Ten Years Ago in Sport

Years ago most of the big league players were sturdy Irishmen and bore some good old names, such as Casey, O'Brien, Ryan, Kelly, Moran and the like. Nowadays it's different, for every nationality is represented in the big leagues, some of them with names that would give a man the tremens if he attempted to pronounce them. They should shorten their names a bit. We suggest the following: Hobby for Hoblitzel; Hoster for Hoelskoetter; Higgins for Higginbotham, and Abby for Abbaticchio. (Schreck's right name is Screckengost, Pelty's name is Peltheimer and Karl Aschenbach is known as Charles. Did you ever know this before?)

Bill Gibson, matchmaker of the Fairmont A. C., is trying to clinch a match between Harlem Tommy Murphy and Packy McFarland for Thanksgiving Day. (Wonder how he came out?)

Jack Goodman and Bert Keyes, both of New York, meet in a six-round bout at the Olympic A. C., Tuesday night. Goodman is said to be as shifty and clever as Joe Gans. (If Jack was as shifty and clever as the Old Master he surely was a "good man.")

Terry McGovern and Young Corbett are picking up quite a little change down in Virginia at the big fair. Corbett will try and get in shape for a few six-round bouts in New York.

Marvin Hart, the Louisville heavyweight, and John Willis of Chicago meet at Philadelphia, November 14, in a six-round affair.

Al Shrubb, the little English runner, defeated a relay of three men, composed of two Americans and one Canadian, at Buffalo yesterday. His opponents were "Bill" Allen, Jim Moynihan and "Bill" Davis, the Indian. Shrubb won by half a mile. Al covered the distance in 26 minutes 10 3-5 seconds. (Didn't we tell you the other day he'd win?)

Frank Kramer, the champion bicycle rider, broke his own world's record for twenty-five miles at Newark, N. J., yesterday, riding the distance in 57 minutes 26 4-5 seconds. His previous time was 57 minutes 52 4-5 seconds. (Frank was some rider, we believe.)

* * *

Sam Langford and Philadelphia Jack O'Brien are slated for a six-round bout at New York, October 30. (Don't get into any argument about the outcome. The slate evidently got broken, as the bout didn't take place.)

WOUNDED HOCKEY STAR NAMED K. OF C. SECRETARY

New York, Oct. 26.—Horace Gaul, of Ottawa, Canada, one of the world's greatest hockey and lacrosse players, is going to France as a Knights of Columbus secretary. Gaul enlisted in the Canadian troops in 1914, and was severely wounded at Neuve Chappele.

BATTLING LAHN IN TAME DRAW WITH CURRIE

By RINGSIDE.

Battling Lahn of New York and Joe Currie of New Haven, Ct., featherweights of fair repute went twelve rounds to a draw at the Commercial A. C. Their bout was fairly good in spots; at other times it was extremely uninteresting.

If Currie had landed some of the blows aimed at Lahn's face, the affair might have ended differently. But the New Yorker proved an adept at making Joe miss.

Lahn aimed for the body throughout, while Currie tried for the face and head the entire distance.

Charley Parker of the South End again defeated Johnny Gray of Chelsea in the eight-round semi-final. 'Twas a rugged bout. In the third round Gray landed a sweet punch to Parker's stomach, sending Charley down.

Parker claimed the blow was foul, but Referee Larry Conley couldn't see it that way. On arising he tore at Gray like a tiger, in fact, the way Charley fought after the alleged foul blow proved the blow had done little, if any damage.

Mickey Travers hit a bit too hard for Charley (Kid) Miller and landed Conley's award in a six-round affair. Battling Hurley of the North End, stopped Young Dundee in four rounds.

YANKEES NEARLY SHOOT UP OWN COMRADES

German-Americans Conversing in German in Trench Mistaken for Enemy

By BERT FORD.

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

With the American Army Northwest of Verdun, Oct. 26.—Loyal German-Americans from Pennsylvania, members of the 301st Machine Gun Battalion of the 79th Division, were nearly shot up by their comrades because they conversed in Germon on a front-line trench. The story was told today by Captain John Miller Bonbright, commander of B Company, Machine Gun Battalion, a former managing editor of the Philadelphia North American.

A heavy rain was falling and a gale was blowing when an American unit received orders to hasten to advanced positions in the woods on the Argonne-Meuse front. Owing to the storm and the pitch darkness the men got lost and wandered out into No Man's Land beyond our infantry lines.

The Seventy-Ninth Division is made up of men from Pennsylvania and Maryland, and contains many boys of German extraction.

Some of the German-Americans who were in the first line trenches began speaking to one another in German. The Yankees out in No Man's Land were just about to open fire, thinking that they were overhearing conversation in a Boche trench when Lieutenant John Walters of Altoona, Pa., discovered the mistake. He advanced towards the trench, but was held up by a sentry.

With the menacing muzzle of the sentinel's rifle pointed at him, Walters explained the mistake and said that it was only the mention of Pennsylvania that had prevented the men from opening fire. "Oh, Hell, they are only Pennsylvania Dutch boys," drawled the disgusted sentry.

The Pennsylvanians had quite a laugh over the incident, but they are now more careful about using any German when they are on the firing line. The Seventy-ninth division had a difficult task advancing across the rolling country between the Argonne forest and the Meuse river in the face of terrific artillery and machine gun fire without getting a sight of the enemy. The only Germans seen were dead men and prisoners.

It was an extremely difficult task for offensive machine-gun work, but the Americans did superbly.

During the advance a great German shell broke right in front of one American unit. Despite the fact that the troops had never been under fire before, not a single soldier gave an inch of ground and not one flinched.

American Aviators Given Distinguished Honors by British

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 26.—Eleven enemy airplanes and one hostile balloon were brought down by American aviators brigaded with the British during the period from September 9 to September 22, inclusive, and five American aviators were awarded the British distinguished flying cross, according to the latest Royal Flying Corps communiques just received here. Special mention was made as follows:

Lieut. G. A. Vaughn, while on an offensive patrol, was engaged by about 15 enemy airplanes, one of which he dived on and shot down in flames. He then attacked another, which he followed down to 2,000 feet. This enemy airplane was seen to crash by another pilot.

The distinguished flying cross was awarded to Lieut. G. A. Vaughn, Brooklyn, N. Y.; T. J. Herbert, Cleveland, O.; M. L. Campbell, Wakeman, O.; L. A. Hamilton, Pittsfield, Mass., and J. A. Keating, Chicago.

Enemy airplanes were brought down by Lieutenant H. C. Knotts, Carlinville, Ill.; H. L. Blair, New York; W. W. Lauer, Pittsburgh, Pa.; F. E. Luff, Cleveland Heights, O.; T. L. Moore, Kewanee, Ill.; J. W. Creech, Washington, D. C.; W. Clements, Gloucester, Va.; F. E. Kindley, Gravette, Ark.; H. Burdick, Brooklyn, N. Y.; E. W. Springs, Lancaster, Pa.; G. D. Wicks, Sanquoit, N. Y.

A hostile balloon was brought down by Second Lieutenant A. F. Dimond, Mobile, Ala.

250,000 TO PUSH WAR FUND IN N. E.

Two hundred and fifty thousand workers in New England are already beginning their preparations for the great drive for funds to be conducted by the United War Work organization, beginning November 11. The drive will last one week, during which $170,500,000 must be raised. It is hoped and expected that this amount will be oversubscribed by 50 per cent.

The number of workers enlisted in New England, it is estimated, would fill the Harvard Stadium six times over. Placed in single file they would extend from Scollay square, Boston, to Monument square, Portland, Me. They include clerks and stenographers, merchants, educators, naval and military heads, as well as boys and girls.

The fund raised will be used for relief work among our soldiers. The campaign is non-sectarian, and will be conducted jointly by seven great organizations: The Salvation Army, the Y. M. C. A., the War Camp Community Service, the National Catholic War Council, which includes the Knights of Columbus; the American Library Association, the Jewish Welfare Board and the Y. W. C. A.

During the campaign 3,000 speakers will cover all parts of New England; half a million posters will be sent broadcast, and advertising space in street cars and newspapers has already been offered and accepted. The publicity headquarters is at the Equitable Building, Boston.

BOSTON TRADES 'DOUBLE UP' ON FOURTH LOAN

Figures Show What Committee Did to Help Uncle Sam "Go Over"

Final figures for the subscription to the "Fighting Fourth" Liberty Loan obtained through the Boston Trades Committee show a total of $140,346,000, as compared with a total of $70,357,000 obtained for the Third Liberty Loan.

New England's total subscription to the Fourth Loan, which it was reported would be made public today, was not forthcoming owing to the failure of fifty-four banks in various sections to send in their final totals. The New England figures will probably be announced early in the coming week. Estimates of the aggregate total subscribed by New England have put the expected amount as high as $600,000,000, which would be a 20 per cent. oversubscription of the New England quota of $500,000,000.

The results obtained by the various trades committees alphabetically arranged are as follows:

PLAN BIG CAMPAIGN OF NATURALIZATION

Washington, Oct. 26.—The United States will undertake during the coming Winter the most intensive and extensive campaign of naturalization in her history, it was announced today. The public schools are being utilized in every part of the Union and citizenship classes are being formed everywhere for alien born residents who want to make their homes henceforth in this country and to be admitted to full membership in the nation's great family.

WESTERLY, R. I., AIR OFFICER IS CITED

Westerly, R. I., Oct. 26.—Lieutenant Charles Raymond Blake, aviation section, signal corps, son of Mrs. Eileen W. The Stage

by F. J. McIsaac

"GOING UP" AND OTHER BIG FEATURES

One of the outstanding musical successes of the past season in New York was "Going Up," a Cohan and Harris production which, like so many other recent musical comedies, is built upon an extinct farce, in this case James Montgomery's "The Aviator."

It happened that public interest in aviation, being greatly stimulated by the war, "The Aviator" has been more successful in "Going Up" than in its original form. This is partly due to the bright music of Louis Hirsch and the ingenious lyrics of Otto Harbach, and party due to the presence in the cast of Frank Craven and Edith Day.

Craven will be remembered as the star of his own play, "Too Many Cooks" at the Plymouth several seasons ago.

Edith Day sprang into fame almost overnight. She is the daughter of a Minnesota newspaper man and her span of life on the stage is barely three seasons. Not much more than a year ago she came to Boston in her first big part, one of the widows in "His Little Widows."

This piece, by the way, was one of the most enjoyable musical comedies in several seasons, but it died like a dog in Boston, and Miss Day was out of her job. Being at liberty she took the role offered her in "Going Up," and right away she became a Broadway favorite. What do you think of that girls? But don't get excited, it doesn't happen very often.

Silks at $100 a Yard.

We are so accustomed to think of the stage as the land of make believe that we often overlook the concrete reality of the costumes and scenery, particularly the costumes.

The producers do not overlook this fact. There is no substitute for silks and satins behind the footlights, and those ladies who appreciate the quite marvellous costuming in "Chu Chin Chow" would appreciate them more if they realized how much they cost.

Morris Gest, one of the producers, was discussing the cost of materials while the audience was filing into the Shubert the other evening. "You remember that little scene when Ali Baba, his son and the singing slave go into a shop to spend the gold they have looted from the robbers' cave? You will recall that Ali invests himself with roll after roll of silks and satins.

"We had to pay as high as a hundred dollars a yard for that stuff from Wanamaker. It is mostly Indian and Chinese silk and brocade of the very richest and rarest colors and patterns. There is nothing in the way of imitation which could stand the dazzling lights of 'Chu Chin Chow.' We have to give them the real thing, and we do.

"Perhaps you didn't even notice that the pedlar of jewelry in the bazaar was almost completely covered with necklaces and ropes of oriental jewelry. Of course, the jewelry is imitation, but for the imitations we had to pay several thousand dollars."

"Chu Chin Chow" is a piece in which the rare beauty of the settings and lightings is best appreciated from a seat in the middle or rear of the orchestra. Those persons who insist upon the very front rows may be able to drink in the feminine loveliness and secure special information regarding the female form divine, but they miss much of the gorgeous lighting and color effects.

No One Adjective Will Do.

In reading over some dramatic criticisms of twenty years ago I was reminded how much more attention the individual actors in a production received in those leisurely days, than at present when a brief impressionistic review of a play is torn off by the hurried critic and the artist dismissed with a line.

I have heard the older actors grumbling in cafes over the lack of appreciation of the present generation of critics, but the young actor can get all the rapture of indignation out of a single adjective than the older generation got out of a quarter of a column.

But such work as that of Gregory Kelly in "Seventeen" deserves much more than merely passing mention. Kelly is not a boy, he is twenty-five years old. Therefore it is art which enables him so graphically to depict a seventeen-year-old boy, his self-importance, his sensitiveness, his idiocy and his soaring emotions. The abjectness of his humiliation when seen by the object of his affections assisting an old negro to carry washboilers, and the sublimity of his feelings when arrayed in his father's dress suit. The mute tragedy of his situation at the dance when his late arrival prevents his getting a dance with his inamorata was all the more poignant because most of the audience thought it was funny.

Kelly is fortunate in playing a character written by one who knows the human heart, a role without a note of anything but truth and sincerity, but Tarkington, the author, is also fortunate in having an actor who is capable of understanding and playing such a role in a truly realistic manner.

A Rare Bloom

Some folks may like "She Took a Chance" and some may like it less, but there are no two opinions about Wanda Lyon, who plays the young wife in that K. & E. musical effusion at the Tremont; she is positively the very last and latest word in baby dolls.

Not since Fanny Ward and Peggy Hopkins rode into fame upon an aurora of bright gold hair, big, bright eyes and seraphic lips has such concentrated essence of peachiness drifted into view.

When Miss Lyon acts you suspend judgment until you can see her in repose again, and then you forgive her for almost anything.

Where did she come from?

Well, she was recently one of the orchids of the Winter Garden, but before that she was a little Mormon girl in Salt Lake City and a living, breathing justification of the tenets of Brigham Young.

No less an expert botanist than Al Jolson recognized her claims to membership in a front row when she turned up in Kansas City or some such place and suggested timidly that she be given a job. Now she is a regular actress.

By the way, after witnessing "She Took a Chance" I am still puzzling which of the four or five winsome principals is referred to in the title. They all appeared to be doing so constantly.

Mantell's First Offence

"Romeo and Juliet," which he has revived after many years for the purpose of featuring his youthful leading woman, Miss Genevieve Hamper, as the most picturesque of Shakespeare's heroines, was the first Shakespearean play in which Robert B. Mantell appeared as a star.

This was back in the early '80s, after he had made his romantic hit in "Fedora." Loris Ipanoff in "Fedora" established Mantell's reputation as an actor of the matinee idol type, and he was starred in a series of romantic plays in which he is still vividly remembered by the older playgoers — "Monbars," "The Corsican Brothers," "The Face in the Moonlight," and the like. Mantell, whose youthful stage training in England, Ireland and Scotland had been in Shakespeare, had a desire that his romantic repertoire should include some representative classic plays, and accordingly he staged "Romeo and Juliet" and "The Lady of Lyons," giving occasional performances along with his modern repertoire.

It was in "Romeo and Juliet," too, though not in the stellar part, that Mantell made his first appearance on the American stage. This was in Albany, N. Y., on the night of November 18, 1878, when he played Tybalt in the support of Mme. Modjeska.

Finally, it was in "Romeo and Juliet" that Mr. Mantell first presented Miss Hamper as a featured actress. This was on the afternoon of November 21, 1917, in Indianapolis.

"Tis an Ill Wind."

Humpty Dumpty sat on a wall,
Humpty Dumpty had a great fall.

This jingle describes exactly what happened to a play called "Humpty Dumpty," in which Otis Skinner expected to spend a season in New York. It fell ingloriously and nobody could put it together again. This explains why we are to have Mr. Skinner in our midst at the conclusion of Miss Anglin's stay at the Hollis in "The Honor of the Family," the romantic drama in which he scored one of his greatest successes a decade or more ago. The revival will give great pleasure to lovers of the theatre in Boston; so far as we are concerned "Humpty Dumpty," like the Kaiser, is small loss.

Dishabille Bulletin

Mr. A. H. Woods, the eminent supporter of sociological dramas, being much encouraged by the success of the farce bearing the intimate title of "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," has just put a farce in rehearsal which rejoices in the cozy title of "Up in Mabel's Room."

Field's Scroll of Shame.

Because he has to spout Pro-German opinions during the first half of "Friendly Enemies" Lew Fields feels particularly vicious regarding the enemies of mankind. That's why he has thought up the following suggestion for the newspapers.

"If every paper were to carry daily a "Scroll of Shame" which contained a list of the crimes committed by Germany since she started the war and bearing the motto "Lest We Forget," it would keep before the American people the need for complete victory."

The only trouble with Lew's suggestion is that no newspaper has space enough to print all the crimes Germany has committed in one issue. It might be run as a serial feature and then it would last a year.

McISAAC says that

"CHU CHIN CHOW," at the Shubert, is the most dazzling, colorful overwhelmingly beautiful spectacular production ever brought to Boston. Its vast company, lovely costumes, good comedy and lively music make it a rare entertainment.

MARGARET ANGLIN in "Billeted," at the Hollis, has a light and spirited comedy, full of sparkling lines and diverting situations. The supporting company is very adequate. This is her last week.

"MAYTIME," at the Majestic will be remembered as one of the sweetest and most delightful of operettas performed by a gifted company, headed by Peggy Wood, William Norris and Charles Purcell.

"SHE TOOK A CHANCE," at the Tremont, is one of the cleverest farces of recent years, ingeniously upholstered with pretty music and decorated by a typical K. and E. chorus. May Vokes heads the excellent cast. Last week.

"SEVENTEEN," at the Plymouth, is a dramatization of Booth Tarkington's tales of high school girls and boys. It is notable for sincerity of theme and exceptional acting.

"OH, LADY, LADY," the Princess Theatre festival of pretty girls, jingling tunes and gingery action is soon to leave the Wilbur Theatre.

"FRIENDLY ENEMIES," with Lew Fields and Charles Winninger, at the Park Square, is the most successful play dealing with the war and the plight of Germans in America. It is a good comedy with melodramatic moments.

"CRASHING THROUGH TO BERLIN," the feature film at Tremont Temple, is a well-edited arrangement of actual war events from the beginning four years ago until the present. It is surprisingly dramatic and free from faking and hocum.

COLONIAL THETARE

It is one of the rarest things in theatricals these days to find a musical comedy with a real plot—yet this rarity has been found in "Going Up" that delightful musical play which Cohan and Harris are to present at the Colonial Theatre beginning Monday night.

"Going Up" is really a farce comedy set to music with a generous allotment of dances sprinkled through its three acts. It is as sprightly and amusing as any comedy the stage has seen in recent years. Otto Harbach, who has given us a round dozen musical comedies in recent years, is responsible for the piece in its new form, having adapted it from James Montgomery's comedy "The Aviator." To his lyrics and book Louis A. Hirsch has added a musical score including some twelve melodies that is far above the average in tunefulness. In the selection of the cast Cohan and Harris have spared neither pains nor expense and Boston theatregoers are assured of a most capable company that includes such well-known stage luminaries as Frank Craven, Edith Day, Marion Sunshine, Frank Otto, John Park, George W. Callahan, Jean Newcombe, Arman Kaliz, William H. Powell and Edward Begley. The chorus, which numbers forty girls, is said to be fair to look upon, while at the same time possessing more than ordinary ability and voice.

COPLEY THEATRE

The second week of "The Chinese Puzzle" begins at the Copley Theatre Monday evening. This play, which during the past three months has proved a sensation in London, bids fair to repeat its success here in Boston. It tells a thrillingly interesting story of happenings at an English country house when some valuable diplomatic documents have been photographed and disclosed to the public through the press. Various people are suspected, and the audience finds itself interested in the problem as to who is the culprit, the play being of unusual novelty through the introduction into the plot of the Marquis Chi Lung, a Chinese diplomat.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE

With a performance of "King Lear," generally regarded as his masterpiece of tragic acting, just as it is Shakespeare's masterpiece of dramatic composition, Robert B. Mantell will open the second and last week of his engagement at the Boston Opera House next Monday night.

"King Lear" will be repeated Thursday night. The other dramas of the week are "Macbeth," Tuesday and Friday nights; "Romeo and Juliet," Wednesday afternoon; "The Merchant of Venice," Wednesday night and Saturday afternoon, and "Richelieu," Saturday night.

The popular Wednesday matinee performance of "Romeo and Juliet" will be of special interest to women, in that it will reveal Miss Hamper as the most picturesque of Shakespeare's heroines.

ORPHEUM THEATRE

An all-star bill of vaudeville will be presented for the first half of the week at Loew's Orpheum Theatre, several of the acts being of sufficiently high calibre to head any big program. Prominent mention is deserved by Edmunds & Lawton, who present their merry musical and comedy success, "Going to the Wedding," and by the one-act comedy, "Don't Lie to Mamma." Other acts will be the Harvey De Vora Trio in their singing and dancing skit, "Frolics on a Roof-Garden;" Billy De Vere in songs and stories; McDonald & Cleveland, conversational comics, and Francis & Wilson. On the screen there will be shown the latest news and war pictures, a comedy, and the photoplay, "Such a Little Pirate," picturing Lila Lee.

KEITH'S THEATRE

Blanche Ring, who is a big Boston favorite and one of America's leading comediennes, will make her first Boston appearance of the season as headliner at Keith's next week. In her coming trip to the Hub she has a new repertoire of songs and gowns. Her act is entitled "Tunes of the Time."

Chic Sale is also on the bill. He will offer his new comedy, "The Rural Sunday School Benefit." There are also McKay and Ardine, a clever dancing pair; Seven Honey Boys, Wilton Sisters, Josie O'Meers and Santi on the bill. The last-named is coming to Boston after scoring a big success on Broadway. He will present dances of the Orient. The Pathe Weekly and the latest war pictures will also be shown.

GAYETY THEATRE

Sam Howe's latest offering, entitled "The Butterflies of Broadway," which is to be the next attraction at the Gayety Theatre, with the customary matinees, is bound to come in for more than passing attention. Unlike productions alleging to contain that brand of fun which is supposed to make the Sphinx laugh, this play really boasts of a plot. In fact, the story is plausible enough to permit such situations to develop in the course of events, something not always the case in concoctions built exclusively for laughing purposes. An unusually large cast has been engaged and includes such capable artists as Helen Tarr, prima donna; Sam Howard, brother of Eugene and Willie Howard, the well-known Winter Garden favorites; Jim Coughlin, an adroit eccentric comedian, Hattie Beall, Basil Duck, Jeanette Colbert, Grace Tremont, the "Perpetual Motion" comedienne.

WALDRON'S CASINO

Unlike many musical shows that feature but one comedian, "The Best Show in Town" company, which appears at Waldron's Casino next week, boasts of three stars and an unusually large cast of principals, any one of which in ordinary productions would be starred to shine alone, but James E. Cooper, the noted burlesque producer, believes in numbers, the more the better, so he has gathered together the greatest all-star organization possible for this years' edition of "The Best Show in Town." Among the many will be found such well-known performers as Frank Hunter, Manny Koler, Frank Wesson, Lynn Cantor, Morris Lloyd, Harry Seivers, Helen McArdle, Virginia Ware, the Davenports and Margie Winters.

CASTLE SQUARE REOPENS

No little interest has been aroused by the preliminary announcements of the forthcoming reopening of the Castle Square Theatre. For years that house was famous as the home of a first-class stock company, and after an interval of a season it will undoubtedly resume its place among the leading theatres of its kind in this country. The popular custom of daily matinees, which originated at the Castle Square twenty years ago, will be resumed.

The Castle Square will be under the management of George E. Clark, who is well known to Boston theatre-goers through his association with it during the John Craig regime. The stage will be under the direction of William C. Masson, with Dudley Ayres as leading man, and Miss Ann MacDonald as leading woman. Other important members of the company will be Mark Kent, who was formerly a member of the Castle Square stock company; Aubrey Bosworth, Joseph Sweeney, Teddy Le Duc, Betty Barnicoat, Blanche Frederici and Dorothy Tierney.

The play for the opening week of November 4 will be "Cheating Cheaters," one of the most popular of recent Broadway successes.

SCOLLAY SQUARE OLYMPIA

Annette Kellerman, shapely "Queen of the Sea," is the aquatic star at the Scollay Square Olympia this week. Those who remember her famous picture, "The Daughter of the Gods," are promised in this latest submarine fairy story even more sensational swimming and high diving stunts, combined with really dramatic situations. The art of condensation has been applied to this feature picture so that thrill follows thrill in constant crescendo, until Miss Kellerman attains a hair-raising climax with her dive of 85 feet from a high wire into the breakers below. This comes as a logical part of the story, where the heroine is escaping from a lofty tower by walking a wire cable across a chasm, when the villain cuts the slender strand and at the same time the tower is blown up. It is a thrill worth going many miles to see.

The vaudeville is really a wonderful program, covering all types of entertainment, and covering them well. There are besides a number of really excellent pictures, including several comedies and the ever-popular Olympia News Weekly.

TIGER ROSE

As breezy as the great Northwest, where its events are located, and following a sensational success in New York, where it played to crowded houses for one whole year, David Belasco presents "Tiger Rose" at the Tremont Theatre, Monday, November 4, for a limited engagement. Lenore Ulric will be seen in her noteworthy impersonation of the fascinating French-Canadian heroine, which the New York critics declared to be "a performance not equalled on the New York stage." The same cast of distinguished players with which she was surrounded in New York will be seen in Boston, including William Courtleigh, Bernard McOwen, Thomas Findlay, Armand F. Cortes, Edwin Holt, Calvin Thomas, Fuller Mellish, Arthur J. Wood and Jean Ferrell.

BUSINESS BEFORE PLEASURE

"Business Before Pleasure," which is due for a brief visit at the Shubert-Wilbur Theatre beginning Monday, November 4, comes to Boston with an enviable record. This play ran for a solid year at the Eltinge Theatre in New York and was acclaimed as the greatest comedy ever put on any stage. "Business Before Pleasure" serves to re-introduce those famous characters of Potash and Perlmutter, but this time they are seen in the moving picture making business.

PARK THEATRE

Theda Bara in "When a Woman Sins," a tremendous drama of a modern Magdalene, will be the headline attraction for this week at the Park Theatre. The story centres around Poppea, a nurse, who had been unjustly accused, feels the wild impulses in her blood, and becomes a dancer. Men fling their wealth at her feet, until she meets a young student upon whose steel-fibred character, her allurements are of no avail. How she wins his forgiveness when she is about to despair is told in seven charming acts.

Bert Lytell, Metro's favorite actor, will be seen in "Unexpected Places," a six-act story of a live-wire journalist, who finds himself mistaken for an Englishman, Lord Varden. German spies are on the trail of the nobleman and when the young American, played by Bert Lytell, finds himself the possessor of the Englishman's title, he also finds himself the possessor of the inheritance of the German spies. Many exciting adventures are thrust upon Dick, the most thrilling of which is a young girl who claims the Englishman for her cousin, and then begins the real romance.

The 13th episode of "A Fight for Millions," featuring William Duncan, contains new scenes and action, and the Pathe Weekly of current events and the famous Sunshine Comedy complete the program.

MODERN THEATRE

William S. Hart will be shown in his new photoplay, "Border Wireless," for the first times throughout the week at the Modern Theatre. This shows the actor who has become famous in Western roles as a desperado of the plains turned to soldiers at the call to war. The accompanying photoplay will be "Battling Jane," picturing Dorothy Gish as a sort of feminine Beloved Vagabond settled in a quiet Maine town where she is waitress in the hotel.

ST. JAMES THEATRE

The ruthlessness of the Germans and their methods of spreading the doctrines of German kultur among the people conquered by them, are the basis of the dramatic story, "Vive La France," featuring Dorothy Dalton, which will open at the St. James Theatre the first half of next week. On the same bill we have five acts of vaudeville, which will need no introduction to the Boston theatregoers—Merrell and Hauley, Pierre Pelletier and company, Shepard and Ott, Jackson Wirth Oddonne, Pathe News, "Following a Rookie."

KELLERMANN WALKS A WIRE

Even realism isn't enough these days, according to Anette Kellermann, the internationally famous woman swimmer.

"They wanted realism recently in a picture in which I was starred," she explains, "and so they stretched a cable from the tower on a point of land, across an arm of the sea, to the mainland opposite. Then they induced me to go out on the wire while someone chopped it near the tower end and plunged me into the eighty-five foot space between my starting point and the water. I did the stunt five times before the picture 'took.'

"The other day I was a witness to a private showing of the production. A party of women were present who did not know me, and I overheard one of them remark, knowingly: 'Oh, that isn't real. It couldn't be! They musta used a dummy.' I didn't see the rest of the picture. What was the use, after that?"

Wilson's Jaw

The Wilson jaw in action—the determined features of the statesman who accepted the task of checking the terrible scourge of German militarism that grew out of the Kaiser's lustful desire for world domination—has been transferred to film in a series of characteristic vigorous attitudes in "Crashing Through to Berlin," now running at the Tremont Temple.

The Chief Executive is shown outlining to the American people the reasons why America could no longer honorably remain out of the international conflict. He is shown also marching at the head of the first contingent of selective service men called for duty against the Boche.

The President of the United States is not the only great ruler presented in "Crashing Through to Berlin," however. There are many others—practically all the others—who pased for Universal motion picture men long before it was dreamed that the American army would be the instrument with which victory would be wrested from the legions of the Prussian overlord.

Belgians Like Theda

The management of the Theda Bara photoplays have taken especial pains to exhibit them to the Belgian refugees who are in England, and they like her better than any other American screen star, according to Theda's press agent. They call her "the Second Bernhardt."

In her latest picture, "When a Woman Sins," which will be shown at the Park next week, Miss Bara has a role not unlike that of "Camille," a character she has also played upon the screen, by the way. Bernhardt also played "Camille."

There the resemblance ceases. Bernhardt has red hair, a marvelous voice and only one leg. Theda is dark and vampirish. She has two legs, both rather plump. If she has a voice, it doesn't show on the screen.

Sully, the Scenario King

The scenario writer for the motion pictures is rapidly coming into his own, which own is the recognition of true authorship, which has been the aspiration of many workers in this newest of literary and imaginative craftsmanship. And this recognition has been developed through the attainments of a few photo-playwrights who, through their superior qualities, have begun to mean something to that vast army of audiences who find the motion picture their main drama diversion. Of these few the front rank is occupied by C. Gardner Sullivan, whose scenarios have always been possessed of virile and unusual qualities

His latest photoplay is an excellent example in point. It is titled "The Border Wireless" and serves as a starring vehicle for William S. Hart, a player highly critical and hard to satisfy because of his exacting artistic demands of a scenario. The first showings of this picture will be given at the Beacon Theatre throughout the coming week.

Enid Shipped by Freight.

A suggestion of the hardship of an extreme experience was obtained by the pretty motion picture star, Enid Bennett, during the taking of her latest photoplay, "When Do We Eat," which will be given its first Boston showings through the last half of next week at the Orpheum Theatre. In this picture Miss Bennett plays the part of a young member of an itinerate "Uncle Tom's Cabin" company which met the fate of the road, and she was left penniless. Hence, among other adventures she meets there is a ride in a freight car to get from there to anywhere.

PRESTIGE OF SYMPHONY UNDIMMED

By FRED J. McISAAC.

The Boston Symphony Orchestra is still incomparable.

When the conductor, concert master and more than a score of prominent performers were turned out of the big band last Spring, there were prophets who announced that the day of the Boston Symphony was done.

That no one person is indispensable was admitted, of course, but that such a huge gap in the ranks could be repaired without doing great permanent injury to the orchestra seemed incredible.

That's why the first concert of the season yesterday afternoon was of far more significance than an ordinary opening in other years.

After the first movement of the Cesar Franck symphony in D minor, the lovers of the orchestra leaned back with joyful faces. In sonority, in sweetness, in mellowness and brilliancy, this remodeled orchestra did not have to bow to its own great past.

Every German who stepped out was replaced by an American, a Frenchman or a member of some other Allied nation. The conductor was a Frenchman who had no reputation as a symphonic conductor in this country. Nevertheless the orchestra hadn't suffered in the least.

And the fetish of German musical superiority got another body blow.

This most agreeable result was only achieved by the exercise of admirable judgment by Manager W. H. Brennan in replacing the ejected Germans with equal or superior performers of more pleasing nationalities.

And the three weeks' hiatus due to the epidemic enabled Pierre Monteux to rehearse the orchestra until the new elements were perfectly welded upon the body of the old.

In the concert master's chair now sits an American, Frederick Fradkin, who comes to this high post from the seat of concert master in important European orchestras. Half a dozen skillful French veterans from the band from the trenches were visible in the brass and woodwind section.

Among the strings numerous American violinists have replaced the Germans most satisfactorily. It was a pleasure to see the white head of Alwyn Schroeder, the veteran 'cellist, who has been summoned back to the Boston orchestra for the third time.

Pierre Monteux revealed himself as a singularly competent conductor, and his interpretation of the Franck Symphony and Debussy's "Iberia" was full of surprises for those of us who had heard those works as read through German spectacles. The beauty and majesty of the Franck Symphony was wholly revealed, and the fantastic impressions of Debussy in Spain were clean cut and finely etched.

The novelty of the program was Dukas "Le Peri," a piece of ballet music written for one of the Russian dance stars. Full of original orchestration and alluring rhythms this work is after all but an accompaniment to twinkling feet and gorgeous costuming and pantomime. Without them it makes little impression.

Schmann's noble overture from "Manfred" was performed by Mr. Monteux, in a manner which proved that there is little Chauvinism in his make-up.

BEACON THEATRE

William S. Hart and Dorothy Gish will be the two stars heading their respective photoplays which will be shown at the Beacon Theatre for the first times throughout the week. In "Border Wireless" Mr. Hart is again seen as a bandit in the Far West. He wins the love of a girl telegraph operator through rescuing her from Mexican desperadoes, and later when this country enters the war his patriotism inspires him to enlist with the forces. At the training camp he apprehends some active spies learning of troop movements, and with the aid of the operator he sends a message via wireless, saving the destruction of troop vessels. Miss Gish's photoplay is "Battling Jane," which name character is a young girl set down in a small Maine town where she is the waitress in the hotel.

CODMAN SQUARE THEATRE

Two excellent bills, combining vaudeville acts and motion pictures, will be presented at the Codman Square Theatre. Through the first half, in addition to a quartet of big vaudeville acts, there will be shown the latest news and war pictures, a comedy, and the photoplay, "The Safety Curtain," picturing Norma Talmadge as a young society woman. The bill for the last half will be entirely changed, and the screen offering will be "Pecks Bad Girl," picturing Mabel Normand as a feminine prototype of the bad boy of happy memory. A big Sunday show of films and vaudeville will be given.

FRANKLIN PARK THEATRE

Prescott and his co-worker, Miss Hope Eden, will head the vaudeville bills to be given through the week at Loew's Franklin Park Theatre. The thought-transference and mental demonstration they give are mystifying and pleasurable exhibitions, and never fail to please. Other acts to be shown are Hunter & Brown, in their skit, "Two Men Wanted;" and Caron & Farnum, acrobatic comedians. On the screen there will be shown the news pictures, a comedy, and the photoplay, "The Hun Within," picturing Dorothy Gish. The entire bill changes Thursday. There will be a big Sunday show.

GLOBE THEATRE

Throughout all the week there will be given at the Globe Theatre the first showings of Lila Lee in the charming story pictured from James Oliver Curwood's tale of treasure trove. In this the little star is shown as a girl living with her grandfather, a retired old salt who has a map of an island whereon is buried a pirate's treasure. The hunt for the gold brings many stirring and humorous adventures. Alice Brady also will be shown in "Her Better Half," a stirring drama of modern society.

THRILLING SCENES FROM "HAND OF VENGEANCE"

If the picture-goer insists upon sensation in his entertainment, it is but fair that now and again he should have an opportunity of seeing something different from the ordinary production. In its ten-episode photo-serial, "The Hand of Vengeance," the Gaumont Company has produced something outstanding in the way of a photoplay. Titus, the hero of this story, is not a criminal, though forced to use his wits against talented detectives in every reel. The methods he uses to outwit those who are hounding him are spectacular in the extreme.

Starting off with a tense situation which quickly merges into another even more strongly dramatic, the attention is gripped from the very first. Then follows, with an entire absence of anything resembling "padding," an amazing succession of startling but natural dramatic situations—thrilling adventures, exciting dangers, marvelous escapes, seemingly without end—which keep the interest of the spectators at high tension until the last foot of the final episode.

The principal character is a man who, returning from the dead to avenge his wrongs, calls himself Ultus. Though not a criminal, Ultus is pursued throughout the entire story by officers of the law, and the ingenious methods he uses to keep out of their clutches and to right the wrongs of others have never been equalled in motion picture dramas. The entire serial is just one thrilling surprise after another.

The film is released in New England next Monday and the first episode may be seen in Boston at the Columbia Theatre.

LANCASTER THEATRE

The bill for the first half of the week at the Lancaster Theatre will include Tom Moore in the merry comedy, "Just for Tonight," a story full of excitement and humor, and Virginia Pearson in "Queen of Hearts," in which she is seen as the keeper of a polite Hall of Chance, winning the love of a good man and turning to better endeavors. The bill for the last half includes Ethel Clayton in "A Soul Without Windows."

COLUMBIA THEATRE

Two strong bills of photoplays are announced for the week at Loew's Columbia Theatre. The first half there will be shown Elsie Ferguson in her latest photoplay, "Hearts of the Wild," and Geraldine Farrar in the most sensational of her film impersonations, "Carmen." The bill for the last half includes Ethel Clayton in "The Girl Who Came Back."

SOCIETY GIRL IN STOCK

Marguerite (Peggy) Savage of No. 1302 Commonwealth avenue, a member of the younger social set of Brookline, has joined the Somerville theatre stock organization and will appear in an important role in "Mother Carey's Chickens," the play to be presented there by Manager Clyde McArdle the coming week.

Boats to Continue.

The popularity of the Metropolitan Line to New York has caused the management of the Eastern Steamship Company to determine to continue the boats through the Cape Cod Canal in the service as long as the demand continues. Ordinarily the direct route by water suspends about November 1. It is up to the traveling public how long it desires to take advantage of the low rate to New York via this route.

Baseball Stars in Attendance.

Jim Hooley and his popular Jazz Band are to officiate at the opening of Hibernia Ball Room, Dudley Street, Roxbury, tonight. Among the guests at the opening will be most of the Red Sox stars, including Harold Janvrin, Mike McNally, Stuffy McInnes and others and Tris Speaker will also be present.

CHARGES WEEKS FAILED TO AID U. S. IN WAR

Charging that Senator Weeks did all in his power to prevent the passage of the armor plate bill and that his efforts to protect the steel interests from competition with a government plant would have cost the country millions of dollars if successful, ex-Governor Walsh declared before large gatherings in Stoughton, Quincy and Brockton that this was merely one of many instances where the junior Senator from Massachusetts had failed to support the administration in the conduct of the war.

He aroused enthusiasm when he declared that the people were going to send to the United States Senate this year a man who would be wholeheartedly with President Wilson at all times. He said:

"Another specific instance of Senator Weeks' failure to support the administration was his opposition to the bill authorizing the manufacture of armor plate by the Government.

"The enactment of this bill enabled the Navy Department to save millions of dollars. Secretary of the Navy Daniels believed a Government plant turning out armor plate could command a lower price for that supplied by the big steel companies.

"The government plant is now under construction and the mere threat of government production has kept the price of armor plate down to the prices paid in 1913 and 1914 and saved many millions for the people's pocketbook.

"'We have not gone up a cent in our purchases,' says Secretary Daniels.

"Senator Weeks was a leader in the attempt to defeat the armor plate bill. He took the floor of the Senate in opposition to the bill no less than 117 times. At the last moment Senator Weeks tried to substitute for the original bill authorizing the government making of armor plate, a measure that would require the Secretary of the Navy to secure the whole armor plate supply from the three companies and to pay them a price covering the cost of manufacture, interest on money borrowed and 6 per cent per annum upon the capital invested and the replacement value of the plants. He made no provision for fixing a maximum price of any sort. The substitute bill was defeated.

"Evidence was presented upon the floor of the United States Senate that the steel companies had sold armor plate to Italy at $395 per ton when they were charging our government $425, and to Japan for $406.35, when they were compelling the United States to pay $504.

"What answer has Senator Weeks to make for his vote against the people on this preparedness measure?"

When a Girl Marries

A NEW SERIAL OF YOUNG MARRIED LIFE

Jim and Anne Wait on Table at Luncheon in Their Home to Betty Bryce

By Ann Lisle

(Copyright, 1918, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

CHAPTER XXXV.—Continued

"I HADN'T thought of that. Betty, pressing her own scar to her lips, had realized how my boy's lameness handicapped him. I hated myself for forgetting—I hated her more for remembering.

Tears were very close to my eyes. I wonder what would have happened if I had let them come, if I had cried out my thoughts:

"Oh, it won't do for him to go walking about all day. And he is so happy because he thinks he has! Oh, Betty, what shall we do?"

Instead, I said coldly:

"He has probably thought of that, Mrs. Bryce, and arranged accordingly."

And then I marched in to put the melon on the table. When I came back again Betty had served up the vegetables and had set them on top of the oven to keep hot.

"Thank you for all you've done, Mrs. Bryce. You've helped wonderfully. Now we'll go in. Please let me have your apron. I want you to be company from now on." I got the sentences out jerkily, and Betty, looking at me gravely, obeyed.

It was Jim who helped me carry on the roast and the vegetables—he insisted on snatching a kiss from the cook, which restored her composure, but only for a brief moment, for when we returned to our guests I could see that Betty had been talking confidentially to Captain Winston. Her head was close to his. I felt sure that she had been asking him what to do about Jim.

An angry wave of resentment swept over me. We were asking no favors. Then why couldn't they leave us alone to manage our own affairs!

Everyone Helped

But I managed to conceal my feelings, so dinner was a social as well as a gastronomic success. Captain Winston called it the "delicious-est home meal he had met on this side of the pond." And Jim beamed.

Every one helped "clean-off"—so that was over in a jiffy. Then Captain Winston asked who was for running around to the garage with him to get his car—and Betty volunteered. I saw through that, and I determined they shouldn't "talk us over." So I said smoothly: "Silly children! We'll phone for it."

And they had to.

Betty's turban was in place in a minute or two. To adjust a veil over my sailor took longer, so she left me and went out to join "the boys."

When I was alone, I began to see how I had blundered through pride as grave as Jim's own. I have failed my boy, for he needs me to bridge the gap between that pride of his and the things from which it shuts him off.

I must have dreamed over-long. For from the door-way Jim summoned me.

"Anne! The car is here—we're waiting. Hurry, dear."

"Where's Betty? Ask her to come here," I said, determined now to beg her to forgive me—to help us both.

"She and Terry have run ahead. They're waiting at the elevator. Come on, honey."

I sighed, half in disappointment, half in relief. But I determined that before we came home I would manage a few words alone with Betty.

HAVE COLOR IN CHEEKS

Be Better Looking—Take Olive Tablets

If your skin is yellow—complexion pallid—tongue coated—appetite poor—you have a bad taste in your mouth—a lazy, no-good feeling—you should take Olive Tablets.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—a substitute for calomel—were prepared by Dr. Edwards after 17 years of study with his patients.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color.

To have a clear, pink skin, bright eyes, no pimples, a feeling of buoyancy like childhood days you must get at the cause.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act on the liver and bowels like calomel—yet have no dangerous after effects.

They start the bile and overcome constipation. That's why millions of boxes are sold annually at 10c and 25c per box. All druggists. Take one or two nightly and note the pleasing results.

PREVENT INFLUENZA

If you are "run down" or out of condition, if sluggish bowels have allowed poisonous impurities to accumulate in your system, you are liable to suffer severely with the influenza. Dr. True's Elixir, the famous household medicine of 67 years' reputation, may ward off the influenza or make an attack light and easily thrown off. Why? Because is a vegetable medicine that puts the system in good condition, prevents and relieves constipation, stimulates the appetite and improves the digestive powers. It can do no harm. It is purely vegetable. Ask your druggist for it, or write DR. J. F. TRUE & CO., Auburn, Me. 40c, 60c and $1.00.

Clear Your Skin While You Sleep with Cuticura

All druggists: Soap 25, Ointment 25 & 50, Talcum 25. Sample each free of "Cuticura, Dept. U, Boston."

Ready-Mades as War Aids

By Rita Stuyvesant

THIS war has taught us many lessons, and among them we find the art of dressing economically. The shops this season are showing some smart frocks at remarkably low prices. For instance, while going through a bargain basement of one of our large department stores I saw serge frocks of splendid value for ten dollars. Of course they did not register all the fine touches of the more expensive gowns, but at least they were cut on the accepted lines. With a few additions these low priced frocks can be successfully camouflaged.

One clever woman who is always admired for her unusual dresses recently showed me a navy blue serge frock that she had purchased for only ten dollars. It was a perfectly plain frock, fastened in the back.

The blouse was rather snug and collarless, and had the popular long tight sleeves. With some henna (dull red) soutache braid she outlined a two-inch border design around the neck and down the left side to finger length. A transfer embroidery pattern was purchased from one of the well known pattern companies for the design. The back of the blouse was closed with tiny covered buttons, also of the henna shade, and around the waist there was a navy blue taffeta sash.

Two long sash ends tied at the right were finished with dull red silk tassels. These extra trimmings cost only a few dollars in actual money, but consider what they added in charm to this simple frock.

A lovely afternoon gown of taupe gray satin was marked at twelve dollars. The frock was really made of excellent material, but the style lacked personality.

It reminded one of something dull and lifeless. Made with a minaret tunic and surplice blouse, it was indeed quaintly simple. A clever girl, seeing possibilities in this gray frock, purchased it and proceeded to brighten it a bit.

A yard of French blue soft taffeta was found as a remnant. The minaret tunic was then lined with this material, and was not only ornamental but helped to give a "body" to the satin. The blue was again introduced in a cuff hem at the bottom of the narrow skirt.

The gray satin was turned back, piped with the blue and caught at short intervals with blue covered buttons.

A dainty touch was given to the surplice blouse by adding plaited frills of French blue Georgette crepe as collar and turn-back cuffs. This exquisite frock cost only $15 in all, and indeed was a good bargain.

If you want to mingle pride and patriotism in your war-time wardrobe take advantage of the clearing sales the shops are now offering.

Domestic Diplomacy

Brownsome—To keep peace in the family a man must occasionally give in to his wife.

Wilkie—That's right. There are times when I let my wife make me do exactly as I please.

Only Too Pleased

The merchant was turning down a young applicant on the ground that he had only married men in his business. "Have you a daughter, by any chance?" persisted the young fellow.

Practical Wartime Headgear

As Worn by Women Who Are Doing Their Bit in Various Spheres to Help Win the Battle for Democracy

Below is the steel helmet worn by the women of the W. A. A. C. in England, and to the right is Mrs. Harold Dodd, first woman radio operator in the army, decidedly chic in her smart cap, designed somewhat after the overseas caps now worn by our men.

The Limit

Everybody was trying to oblige the two officers billeted on the family. Even the parlormaid did her bit by looking after their clothes.

But when the major one day gave her another pair of trousers to have a button put on, she exclaimed:

"You have given me the trousers, but never the button, and this is the sixth I've cut off of master's trousers to sew on to yours!"

The Last Word.

The sweet young thing thought she was making a huge success.

Meals Minus Meat

By Loretto C. Lynch

THE last generation, with its cheap and plentiful supply of meat, is indeed to be envied. Old ladies tell us of the days when spare ribs were 4 cents a pound and oxtails could be had for the asking. To make us feel all the worse, they tell us how they could get enough beefsteak once upon a time to feed four or five in family for 25 cents. Many of them have taught their daughters that it is next to impossible to plan a satisfying meal without the use of meat. And so their daughters, who are wives and mothers today, pinched by a war-time market, are asking help.

Isn't this your problem, too, Mrs. Housewife? One must have a primary knowledge of food values before she can satisfactorily make a substitution. There is a class of foods known as body builders. Foods of this class not only build the body, but also repair it. A baby's food for the first year of life consists of almost nothing but milk. If you will notice the change in body between the new-born infant and the year-old child you will realize that milk is a body-building food.

"But you can't give a grown-up, hard-working man a cold bottle of milk instead of meat!" say you. Well, not in the form of plain milk. But supposing you thicken a quart of milk with half a cup of flour rubbed into an equal quantity of butter substitute. Pour it over half a dozen cold boiled potatoes, cut into half-inch cubes. Place the mixture into a baking dish and sprinkle half a cup of grated cheese over the top. Brown slightly in a moderate oven.

This is a nourishing, satisfying dish. It may be varied from time to time by the addition of a bit of garlic or a little chopped onion. If you fry some chopped pimento or green pepper in a little cooking oil you may again vary the dish.

Some time try this dish: Pour a quart of thickened milk, to which half a cup of grated cheese has been added, over half a dozen hard-boiled eggs cut into quarters. Put the mixture in a baking dish and sprinkle with stale bread crumbs. Dot with butter and brown for a moment in a hot oven. Many folks claim that they cannot digest cheese. Of course, cheese, except cottage cheese, perhaps, is not a food for invalids, nor very young children. It is a highly concentrated body-builder. But for hard-working people it is an excellent food. A little of it contains as much nourishment as several times the same quantity of meat.

Not So "Mere"

Tommy stood high in his school examination, but a girl took the highest mark. His father was indignant.

"Tom, I am surprised to find you have allowed yourself to be beaten by a mere girl!" he scoffed.

"Yes, father," said Tom, with a memory of past strenuous efforts, "I have, but I can tell you something—girls are not so very mere, after all!"

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Shall She Marry Again?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

It seems always the young that ask and get your advice; please spare a few minutes for one that has passed her youth. I am an American woman, some years this side of the half-century mark; I have been twice widowed, have children grown and doing for themselves. Would you think it selfish if I married again? Not that I have anyone in mind, but I ask the question because I love my home. Love to do for someone near to me, and as the children grew up, they left, and I am lonely.

I am a good housekeeper, good cook, dress neatly, and make my own clothes, too. Like books and music, but do not care very much for society. I do not want simply to have my future assured, as I am capable of running a boarding house profitably. I want only a home and to make one for others.

E. M. B.

AS your children are grown and doing for themselves, do not see how you would be shirking your maternal duties in marrying again. Indeed, after re-reading your list of qualifications as a wife and housekeeper, it would appear the height of selfishness for one so gifted in these requirements to remain single.

Met Him at Tableaux

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Several weeks ago while participating in a tableaux for the benefit of the Red Cross I met a soldier at an armory where the entertainment took place. Several girl friends and I tried to find seats afterward, and this soldier very kindly stepped forward and assisted us in finding same. He sat next to me and we had a very interesting conversation. He told me he was from the West, and lonesome here. He gave me his name and I invited him to my home. He came up and my mother and I tried to make things agreeable, and I went for a walk with him. After that, it is now four weeks, I haven't seen or heard from him, although he told CONSIDERING that the soldier is a stranger in the city, and that we, as patriotic women, are supposed to show them hospitality, it would be all right for you to invite him to the party. But I should not feel hurt if the invitation is not accepted, as these friendships between men in the service and girls doing Red Cross or other forms of patriotic work are naturally more or less casual. He may be engaged to some one in his own home.

Too Young to Be Engaged

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Not long ago I met a sailor and he has told me he loves me and wants to marry me. But I feel I am entirely too young to think of such a thing, as I am only sixteen years old. He is nineteen. I told him I would marry him when the war is over, but he said if I grew to love him before I could marry him without waiting. Now I really do love him, so I consented to marry him, and we are keeping our engagement a secret. This is what I want to know: Should I let my parents know of it, or should I elope with him, as that is what he wants me to do? He also wants me to go to his native State, but I am afraid to on account of my youth. I know my parents would not approve of our marriage. Please advise.

M. E. G.

SIXTEEN is entirely too young to assume the responsibilities of marriage, particularly without the full consent of one's parents. By all means tell your mother of your engagement. Girls would save themselves a world of trouble if they would only take their mothers or some member of their immediate family into their confidence.

Elizabeth Tells What She Saw of Talak on the Day They Met Him Walking

By Virginia Terhune Van de Water

(Copyright, 1918, Star Company.)

CHAPTER LVI.—Continued

"YES, I am strong enough—I must be strong enough—to do anything, since it is all for John."

"Good!" the young physician approved. "You and I will finish discussing the various phases of this affair, then we will make our plans accordingly.

"Now, to go back to your encounter with the Pole on the day when you and Butler met him as you returned from your walk—the day of the murder. You are sure that the fellow had nothing in his hand—no weapon of any kind?"

"Not when he was talking to John," she affirmed. "I noticed that he kept opening and shutting his hands in a fidgetty kind of way."

"Did you see him before he saw you?"

"Yes, he was walking along the path at the edge of the wood. When John called out to him he stopped. Oh!"—her face changing suddenly as a memory came to her—"I think I do remember his stooping down and laying something on the ground when he heard John's voice. I did not see what it was, but I recollect thinking it was probably his bundle of clothes."

"And you did not see him take it up again?"

"No, for after John had finished talking to him we came right on to the farm. I have no idea what became of Talak after that. He said he was going to Midland."

"Perhaps he did go later," Douglas remarked. "But he may have come back here to the house first. There is only one quick way of finding out."

"And that is"——

"To get him to tell you about it. I doubt if I could coax him to talk as well as you could.

"You see, if he knows that Butler is likely to suffer the extreme penalty for his wrongdoing, and if he can be reminded that John was kind to him—a fact which you say he declared he could never forget—maybe his conscience may be stirred to confess the truth. If he is coming tonight, there is no time to be lost. Yet—watching her narrowly—you said a while ago that you could not see him."

The girl's tone proved to the physician that her recent illness had not weakened her indomitable will. She lifted her head proudly, defying her own feebleness.

"Yes, I did say that then, but I do not say it now. I will see Talak, and will ask him any question you suggest."

CHAPTER LVII.

AS Elizabeth Wade waited for her interview with Sulov Talak she appreciated that once more her abilities as an actress were to be put to the test.

The stage was set carefully for the little drama. After supper she and her brother were to repair to the veranda. When the Pole appeared, Douglas was to retire to the house and take his place behind the closed shutters and open windows of the parlor. Here Mr. Miller, for whom Douglas had telephoned, was to watch and listen with him.

"It seems like an underhanded thing to do," Elizabeth protested.

"Yes, it does," Douglas assented. "Yet it is the only way. We must learn the truth. But the Pole would not tell it to us men. And there must be an unprejudiced witness to his confession. I am not unprejudiced. Miller is."

"Perhaps," the girl ventured, "Talak may be willing to repeat later to you what he tells me."

Wade shook his head skeptically. "Perhaps—but not probable. He may have sense enough to fear for his own safety."

"But," the girl looked up startled, "they would not execute a man like that, would they?"

"No," her brother assured her. "The utmost they would do with a defective of his type would be to put him in an asylum—which is where he ought to be. He is not safe at large—at least the community is not safe. That has been proved by what might have resulted in an attack upon you, and by his shooting his employer."

"He seems to have room in his head for but one idea," Elizabeth mused. "That gives me hope that I may be able to make him confess to you. But I will wait and see. You will be sure to stay right within call, Douglas?" she asked with a sudden sinking of heart.

"Surely, dear," reassuringly. "And now that we have our plans, let us have our supper. Miller will be here by seven-thirty."

The pair ate little, yet talked so naturally that the houseworker from Midland decided that Miss Wade was getting on so well that a maid's services would not be needed much longer.

To Be Continued.

WILSON APPEAL ALARMS RHODE ISLAND G. O. P.

By CHARLES O. POWER

Providence, R. I., Oct. 26.—There has been a great shift in political sentiment in this State within the last three days. The Republican leaders are alarmed and crying for help. An appeal has gone forth to the national headquarters of the party for succor and the original plan of campaign, as mapped out by the State leaders, has been entirely changed.

And President Wilson's letter to his fellow-countrymen, advising them to vote for Democrats, looks like a knockout for the Republican machine in Rhode Island. Men who a few days ago were loudly claiming that it was unbeatable are now saying that it is a blundering old thing.

It is blamed for permitting the Public Utilities Commission to raise street car fares before election. The result of the commission's action has been protest meetings of societies and citizens' indignation meetings in a number of communities, the heckling and hooting of Senator Colt at rallies and steadily increasing indications of a general repudiation of the Republican rule of the State.

The next blunder for which the Republican old-timers are blamed is the circular and the advertisement charging George F. O'Shaunessy, Democratic candidate for United States Senator, with having voted against a bill increasing the pay of soldiers. In replying Mr. O'Shaunessy did not mince words a little bit, branding the statement as a lie and challenging Senator Colt to meet him face to face in public debate so that the people might judge the facts and learn the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

This canard has reacted against the Republican candidate. It has proved a boomerang and, in the hope of avoiding more bad breaks, an appeal has been made to Republican national leaders to send one of their slickest publicity men to Providence.

Mr. O'Shaunessy has knowledge of another attack of similar nature, so far as the truth is concerned, to be made about the middle of next week, and still another planned for the day before election, and he declares he is prepared to meet both of them. He says he has some material in reserve himself that ought to be very effective in a counter attack.

PUTS BLAME ON G. O. P.

And now comes the President and says he wants the Democratic candidate for senator elected. To counteract the influence of that appeal some of the Republican leaders are insisting that Ex-President Roosevelt should be called in and make a stirring campaign for Senator Colt.

But there are others who bear in mind that the senator and his friends have been urging people to support him on the ground that he has supported the policies of the President; that Roosevelt has been demanding that Republican senators oppose the policies of the President to the utmost; and that, therefore, the bringing in of Roosevelt would be another blunder. Hence the quandary and the dilemma and the worried striving for a smooth way out.

Alberic A. Archambault, the Democratic candidate for Governor, in every speech he makes, charges that the Republicans are responsible for the excessive street car fares and gas rates and that, if he is elected governor, he will work for the interests of the people and fight special privileges for the corporations. Daily he dares Governor Beekman to meet him in public debate on State issues but, up to date, the Governor has not made reply. Archambault is out and out for State ownership of the Rhode Island street railway system and the reforming of State commissions. His slogan, "Don't blame the conductor for your troubles, blame Republican rule of the State," has become quite popular.

BIG RALLY TONIGHT.

Tonight the Democrats have their big ratification meeting in Elks Hall, this city. Mayor Gainer will preside. The speakers will be O'Shaunessy, Archambault and Theodore Francis Green, Stephen J. Casey and William O. Troy, candidates for Congress. Other rallies will be held tonight in Depot square, Social square and Monument square, Woonsocket, with the same speakers. They will also speak in Byrnes Hall, corner Atwell avenue and Valley street, this city.

Tomorrow afternoon the candidates, assisted by John J. Fitzgerald, P. H. Quinn and F. P. Duffy will rally in Thornton's Opera House, River Point and the Bijou, Strand and Royal Theatres, this city. Tomorrow evening Mr. Archambault will address a meeting in St. John's Hall, Arctic.

LONG FLINGS CHALLENGE AT BACON

Speaking before enthusiastic rallies at Randolph, Stoughton and Brockton, Richard H. Long, Democratic candidate for Governor, flung back at George A. Bacon, chairman of the Republican State committee, the insinuation that none of his family were engaged in military service.

Declaring that his older son had been commissioned a lieutenant and had remained in charge of Framingham factories at the request of the War Department, that his brother was brigadier general of marines and his brother-in-law a brigadier-general in France, he challenged Mr. Bacon to show what Calvin Coolidge, the Republican candidate, had done for the country or for the commercial life of the State.

He was hailed as the next Governor of the State and at Randolph was cheered several times, besides being given the heartiest welcome at Brockton and Stoughton. He said in part:

"George A. Bacon, chairman of the Republican State Committee, who evidently speaks as the sponsor for the Republican candidate for Governor, Mr. Coolidge, said in a statement sent out by him and published in the press, that none of Candidate Long's sons are in the military service, although one of them has been deemed so essential to the industries of his father that he has remained at home to serve his country in his father's shops.

"It is true that I have two sons. One of my boys is twelve years of age. The other is general manager of our manufacturing business, a man thoroughly trained in the intricacies and familiar with its every detail. When the war broke out, he was called upon by the officers of the War Department to assist them in establishing factories in the western part of the country.

"His experience in our factories, where we made deliveries more promptly than others, was of value to the army, and he continued in service and was given a commission of first lieutenant in the army, but it was decided by the War Department that he could be of more use in our factories at Framingham, and since that time he has been doing good work for his country and he is ready at any time to go where duty calls.

"If Mr. Bacon is interested in obtaining facts he can learn from the officers of the War Department the service which we have rendered in this crisis."

CITY OF BOSTON

STATE ELECTION

City Clerk's Office, Oct. 23, 1918.

In accordance with the provisions of the laws concerning elections, notice is hereby given that meetings of the citizens of this city, qualified to vote for State officers, will be held in the several polling places designated for the purpose by the Board of Election Commissioners, on and all such citizens will on said date, in the several precincts in which they are entitled to vote, give in their votes for Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Secretary of the Commonwealth, Treasurer and Receiver-General, Auditor of the Commonwealth, Attorney-General, Councillors, Senators in the General Court, Representatives in the General Court, Register of Probate and Insolvency, Senator in Congress, and Representatives in Congress; also to give in their votes "Yes" or "No" on the approval and ratification of the following articles of amendment to the Constitution of Massachusetts, submitted by the Constitutional Convention, viz.:

FIRST AMENDMENT

The Initiative and Referendum

I. DEFINITION.

Legislative power shall continue to be vested in the General Court; but the people reserve to themselves the popular initiative, which is the power of a specified number of voters to submit constitutional amendments and laws to the people for approval or rejection; and the popular referendum, which is the power of a specified number of voters to submit laws, enacted by the General Court, to the people for their ratification or rejection.

THE INITIATIVE.

II. INITIATIVE PETITIONS.

SECTION 1. Contents.—An initiative petition shall set forth the full text of the constitutional amendment or law, hereinafter designated as the measure, which is proposed by the petition.

SECTION 2. Excluded Matters.—No measure that relates to religion, religious practices or religious institutions; or to the appointment, qualification, tenure, removal, recall or compensation of judges; or to the reversal of a judicial decision; or to the powers, creation or abolition of courts; or the operation of which is restricted to a particular town, city or other political division or to particular districts or localities of the Commonwealth; or that makes a specific appropriation of money from the treasury of the Commonwealth, shall be proposed by an initiative petition; but if a law approved by the people is not repealed, the General Court shall raise by taxation or otherwise and shall appropriate such money as may be necessary to carry such law into effect.

Neither the eighteenth amendment of the Constitution, as approved and ratified to take effect on the first day of October in the year nineteen hundred and eighteen, nor this provision for its protection, shall be the subject of an initiative amendment.

No proposition inconsistent with any one of the following rights of the individual, as at present declared in the declaration of rights, shall be the subject of an initiative or referendum petition: The right to receive compensation for private property appropriated to public use; the right of access to and protection in courts of justice; the right of trial by jury; protection from unreasonable search, unreasonable bail and the law martial; freedom of the press; freedom of speech; freedom of elections; and the right of peaceable assembly.

No part of the Constitution specifically excluding any matter from the operation of the popular initiative and referendum shall be the subject of an initiative petition; nor shall this section be the subject of such a petition.

The limitations on the legislative power of the General Court in the Constitution shall extend to the legislative power of the people as exercised hereunder.

SECTION 3. Mode of Originating.—Such petition shall first be signed by ten qualified voters of the Commonwealth and shall then be submitted to the attorney-general, and if he shall certify that the measure is in proper form for submission to the people, and that it is not, either affirmatively or negatively, substantially the same as any measure which has been qualified for submission or submitted to the people within three years of the succeeding first Wednesday in December and that it contains only subjects not excluded from the popular initiative and which are related or which are mutually dependent, it may then be filed with the secretary of the Commonwealth. The secretary of the Commonwealth shall provide blanks for the use of subsequent signers, and shall print at the top of each blank a description of the proposed measure as such description will appear on the ballot, together with the names and residences of the first ten signers. All initiative petitions, with the first ten signatures attached, shall be filed with the secretary of the Commonwealth not earlier than the first Wednesday of the September before the assembling of the General Court into which they are to be introduced, and the remainder of the required signatures shall be filed not later than the first Wednesday of the following December.

SECTION 4. Transmission to the General Court.—If an initiative petition, signed by the required number of qualified voters, has been filed as aforesaid, the secretary of the Commonwealth shall, upon the assembling of the General Court, transmit it to the clerk of the House of Representatives, and the proposed measure shall then be deemed to be introduced and pending.

III. LEGISLATIVE ACTION. GENERAL PROVISIONS.

SECTION 1. Reference to Committee.—If a measure is introduced into the General Court by initiative petition, it shall be referred to a committee thereof, and the petitioners and all parties in interest shall be heard, and the measure shall be considered and reported upon to the General Court with the committee's recommendations and the reasons therefor, in writing. Majority and minority reports shall be signed by the members of said committee.

SECTION 2. Legislative Substitutes.—The General Court may, by resolution passed by yea and nay vote, either by the two houses separately, or in the case of a constitutional amendment by a majority of those voting thereon in joint session in each of two years as hereinafter provided, submit to the people a substitute for any measure introduced by initiative petition, such substitute to be designated on the ballot as the legislative substitute for such an initiative measure and to be grouped with it as an alternative therefor.

IV. LEGISLATIVE ACTION ON PROPOSED CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENTS.

SECTION 1. Definition.—A proposal for amendment to the Constitution introduced into the General Court by initiative petition shall be designated an initiative amendment, and an amendment introduced by a member of either house shall be designated a legislative substitute or a legislative amendment.

SECTION 2. Joint Session.—If a proposal for a specific amendment of the Constitution is introduced into the General Court by initiative petition signed by not less than twenty-five thousand qualified voters, or if in case of a proposal for amendment introduced into the General Court by a member of either house, consideration thereof in joint session is called for by vote of either house, such proposal shall, not later than the second Wednesday in June, be laid before a joint session of the two houses, at which the president of the Senate shall preside; and if the two houses fail to agree upon a time for holding any joint session hereby required, or fail to continue the same from time to time until final action has been taken upon all amendments pending, the Governor shall call such joint session or continuance thereof.

SECTION 3. Amendment of Proposed Amendments.—A proposal for an amendment to the Constitution introduced by initiative petition shall be voted upon in the form in which it was introduced, unless such amendment is amended by vote of three-fourths of the members voting thereon in joint session, which vote shall be taken by call of the yeas and nays if called for by any member.

SECTION 4. Legislative Action.—Final legislative action in the joint session upon any amendment shall be taken only by call of the yeas and nays, which shall be entered upon the journals of the two houses; and an unfavorable vote at any stage preceding final action shall be verified by call of the yeas and nays, to be entered in like manner. At such joint session a legislative amendment receiving the affirmative votes of a majority of all the members elected, or an initiative amendment receiving the affirmative votes of not less than one-fourth of all the members elected, shall be referred to the next General Court.

SECTION 5. Submission to the People.—If in the next General Court a legislative amendment shall again be agreed to in joint session by a majority of all the members elected, or if an initiative amendment or a legislative substitute shall again receive the affirmative votes of at least one-fourth of all the members elected, such fact shall be certified by the clerk of such joint session to the secretary of the Commonwealth, who shall submit the amendment to the people at the next State election. Such amendment shall become part of the Constitution if approved, in the case of a legislative amendment, by a majority of the voters voting thereon, or if approved, in the case of an initiative amendment or a legislative substitute, by voters equal in number to at least thirty per cent. of the total number of ballots cast at such State election and also by a majority of the voters voting on such amendment.

V. LEGISLATIVE ACTION ON PROPOSED LAWS.

SECTION 1. Legislative Procedure.—If an initiative petition for a law is introduced into the General Court, signed by not less than twenty thousand qualified voters, a vote shall be taken by yeas and nays in both houses before the first Wednesday of June upon the enactment of such law in the form in which it stands in such petition. If the General Court fails to enact such law before the first Wednesday of June, and if such petition is completed by filing with the secretary of the Commonwealth, not earlier than the first Wednesday of the following July nor later than the first Wednesday of the following August, not less than five thousand signatures of qualified voters, in addition to those signing such initiative petition, which signatures must have been obtained after the first Wednesday of June aforesaid, then the secretary of the Commonwealth shall submit such proposed law to the people at the next State election. If it shall be approved by voters equal in number to at least thirty per cent. of the total number of ballots cast at such State election and also by a majority of the voters voting on such law, it shall become law, and shall take effect in thirty days after such State election or at such time after such election as may be provided in such law.

SECTION 2. Amendment by Petitioners.—If the General Court fails to pass a proposed law before the first Wednesday of June, a majority of the first ten signers of the initiative petition therefor shall have the right, subject to certification by the attorney-general filed as hereinafter provided, to amend the measure which is the subject of such petition. An amendment so made shall not invalidate any signature attached to the petition. If the measure so amended, signed by a majority of the first ten signers, is filed with the secretary of the Commonwealth before the first Wednesday of the following July, together with a certificate signed by the attorney-general to the effect that the amendment made by such proposers is in his opinion perfecting in its nature and does not materially change the substance of the measure, and if such petition is completed by filing with the secretary of the Commonwealth, not earlier than the first Wednesday of the following July nor later than the first Wednesday of the following August, not less than five thousand signatures of qualified voters, in addition to those signing such initiative petition, which signatures must have been obtained after the first Wednesday of June aforesaid, then the secretary of the Commonwealth shall submit the measure to the people in its amended form.

VI. CONFLICTING AND ALTERNATIVE MEASURES.

If in any judicial proceeding, provisions of constitutional amendments or of laws approved by the people at the same election are held to be in conflict, then the provisions contained in the measure that received the largest number of affirmative votes at such election shall govern.

A constitutional amendment approved at any election shall govern any law approved at the same election.

The General Court, by resolution passed as hereinbefore set forth, may provide for grouping and designating upon the ballot as conflicting measures or as alternative measures, only one of which is to be adopted, any two or more proposed constitutional amendments or laws which have been or may be passed or qualified for submission to the people at any one election; provided, that a proposed constitutional amendment and a proposed law shall not be so grouped, and that the ballot shall afford an opportunity to the voter to vote for each of the measures or for only one of the measures, as may be provided in said resolution, or against each of the measures so grouped as conflicting or as alternative. In case more than one of the measures so grouped shall receive the vote required for its approval as herein provided, only that one for which the largest affirmative vote was cast shall be deemed to be approved.

THE REFERENDUM.

I. WHEN STATUTES SHALL TAKE EFFECT.

No law passed by the General Court shall take effect earlier than ninety days after it has become a law, excepting laws declared to be emergency laws and laws which may not be made the subject of a referendum petition, as herein provided.

II. EMERGENCY MEASURES.

A law declared to be an emergency law shall contain a preamble setting forth the facts constituting the emergency, and shall contain the statement that such law is necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health, safety or convenience. A separate vote shall be taken on the preamble by call of the yeas and nays, which shall be recorded, and unless the preamble is adopted by two-thirds of the members of each House voting thereon, the law shall not be an emergency law; but if the Governor, at any time before the election at which it is to be submitted to the people on referendum, files with the secretary of the Commonwealth a statement declaring that in his opinion the immediate preservation of the public peace, health, safety or convenience requires that such law should take effect forthwith and that it is an emergency law and setting forth the facts constituting the emergency, then such law, if not previously suspended as hereinafter provided, shall take effect without suspension, or if such law has been so suspended such suspension shall thereupon terminate and such law shall thereupon take effect; but no grant of any franchise or amendment thereof, or renewal or extension thereof for more than one year shall be declared to be an emergency law.

III. REFERENDUM PETITIONS.

SECTION 1. Contents.—A referendum petition may ask for a referendum to the people upon any law enacted by the General Court which is not herein expressly excluded.

SECTION 2. Excluded Matters.—No law that relates to religion, religious practices or religious institutions; or to the appointment, qualification, tenure, removal or compensation of judges; or to the powers, creation or abolition of courts; or the operation of which is restricted to a particular town, city or other political division or to particular districts or localities of the Commonwealth; or that appropriates money for the current or ordinary expenses of the Commonwealth or for any of its departments, boards, commissions or institutions shall be the subject of a referendum petition.

SECTION 3. Mode of Petitioning for the Suspension of a Law and a Referendum thereon.—A petition asking for a referendum on a law, and requesting that the operation of such law be suspended, shall first be signed by ten qualified voters and shall then be filed with the secretary of the Commonwealth not later than thirty days after the law that is the subject of the petition has become law. The secretary of the Commonwealth shall provide blanks for the use of subsequent signers, and shall print at the top of each blank a description of the proposed law as such description will appear on the ballot together with the names and residences of the first ten signers. If such petition is completed by filing with the secretary of the Commonwealth not later than ninety days after the law which is the subject of the petition has become law the signatures of not less than fifteen thousand qualified voters of the Commonwealth, then the operation of such law shall be suspended, and the secretary of the Commonwealth shall submit such law to the people at the next State election, if thirty days intervene between the date when such petition is filed with the secretary of the Commonwealth and the date for holding such State election; if thirty days do not so intervene, then such law shall be submitted to the people at the next following State election, unless in the meantime it shall have been repealed, and if it shall be approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting thereon, such law shall, subject to the provisions of the Constitution, take effect in thirty days after such election, or at such time after such election as may be provided in such law; if not so approved such law shall be null and void; but no such law shall be held to be disapproved if the negative vote is less than thirty per cent. of the total number of ballots cast at such State election.

SECTION 4. Petitions for Referendum on an Emergency Law or a Law the Suspension of which is not asked for.—A referendum petition may ask for the repeal of an emergency law or of a law which takes effect because the referendum petition does not contain a request for suspension, as aforesaid. Such petition shall first be signed by ten qualified voters of the Commonwealth, and shall then be filed with the secretary of the Commonwealth not later than thirty days after the law which is the subject of the petition has become law. The secretary of the Commonwealth shall provide blanks for the use of subsequent signers, and shall print at the top of each blank a description of the proposed law as such description will appear on the ballot together with the names and residences of the first ten signers. If such petition filed as aforesaid is completed by filing with the secretary of the Commonwealth not later than ninety days after the law which is the subject of the petition has become law the signatures of not less than ten thousand qualified voters of the Commonwealth protesting against such law and asking for a referendum thereon, then the secretary of the Commonwealth shall submit such law to the people at the next State election, if thirty days intervene between the date when such petition is filed with the secretary of the Commonwealth and the date for holding such State election. If thirty days do not so intervene, then it shall be submitted to the people at the next following State election, unless in the meantime it shall have been repealed; and if it shall not be approved by a majority of the qualified voters voting thereon, it shall, at the expiration of thirty days after such election, be thereby repealed; but no such law shall be held to be disapproved if the negative vote is less than thirty per cent. of the total number of ballots cast at such State election.

GENERAL PROVISIONS.

I. IDENTIFICATION AND CERTIFICATION OF SIGNATURES.

Provision shall be made by law for the proper identification and certification of signatures to the petitions hereinbefore referred to, and for penalties for signing any such petition, or refusing to sign it, for money or other valuable consideration, and for the forgery of signatures thereto. Pending the passage of such legislation all provisions of law relating to the identification and certification of signatures to petitions for the nomination of candidates for State offices or to penalties for the forgery of such signatures shall apply to the signatures to the petitions herein referred to. The General Court may provide by law that no co-partnership or corporation shall undertake for hire or reward to circulate petitions, may require individuals who circulate petitions for hire or reward to be licensed, and may make other reasonable regulations to prevent abuses arising from the circulation of petitions for hire or reward.

II. LIMITATION ON SIGNATURES.

Not more than one-fourth of the certified signatures on any petition shall be those of registered voters of any one county.

III. FORM OF BALLOT.

Each proposed amendment to the Constitution, and each law submitted to the people, shall be described on the ballots by a description to be determined by the attorney-general, subject to such provision as may be made by law, and the secretary of the Commonwealth shall give each question a number and cause such question, except as otherwise authorized herein, to be printed on the ballot in the following form:

In the case of an amendment to the Constitution: Shall an amendment to the Constitution (here insert description, and state, in distinctive type, whether approved or disapproved by the General Court, and by what vote thereon) be approved?	YES.
	NO.

In the case of a law: Shall a law (here insert description, and state, in distinctive type, whether approved or disapproved by the General Court, and by what vote thereon) be approved?	YES.
	NO.

IV. INFORMATION FOR VOTERS.

The secretary of the Commonwealth shall cause to be printed and sent to each registered voter in the Commonwealth the full text of every measure to be submitted to the people, together with a copy of the legislative committee's majority and minority reports, if there be such, with the names of the majority and minority members thereon, a statement of the votes of the General Court on the measure, and a description of the measure as such description will appear on the ballot; and shall, in such manner as may be provided by law, cause to be prepared and sent to the voters other information and arguments for and against the measure.

V. THE VETO POWER OF THE GOVERNOR.

The veto power of the Governor shall not extend to measures approved by the people.

VI. THE GENERAL COURT'S POWER OF REPEAL.

Subject to the veto power of the Governor and to the right of referendum by petition as herein provided, the General Court may amend or repeal a law approved by the people.

VII. AMENDMENT DECLARED TO BE SELF-EXECUTING.

This article of amendment to the Constitution is self-executing, but legislation not inconsistent with anything herein contained may be enacted to facilitate the operation of its provisions.

VIII. ARTICLES IX. and XLII. OF AMENDMENTS OF THE CONSTITUTION ANNULLED.

Article IX. and Article XLII. of the amendments of the Constitution are hereby annulled.

SECOND AMENDMENT

Public Interest in Natural Resources

The conservation, development and utilization of the agricultural, mineral, forest, water and other natural resources of the Commonwealth are public uses, and the General Court shall have power to provide for the taking, upon payment of just compensation therefor, of lands and easements or interests therein, including water and mineral rights, for the purpose of securing and promoting the proper conservation, development, utilization and control thereof and to enact legislation necessary or expedient therefor.

THIRD AMENDMENT

Regulation of Advertising in Public Places

Advertising on public ways, in public places and on private property within public view may be regulated and restricted by law.

FOURTH AMENDMENT

Preservation and Maintenance of Property of Historical and Antiquarian Interest

The preservation and maintenance of ancient landmarks and other property of historical or antiquarian interest is a public use, and the Commonwealth and the cities and towns therein may, upon payment of just compensation, take such property or any interest therein under such regulations as the General Court may prescribe.

FIFTH AMENDMENT

Adjournments of the General Court

The General Court, by concurrent vote of the two houses, may take a recess or recesses amounting to not more than thirty days; but no such recess shall extend beyond the sixtieth day from the date of their first assembling.

SIXTH AMENDMENT

Selection of Officers of the Militia

Article X. of Section I. of Chapter II. of the Constitution, the last two paragraphs of Article IV. of the Articles of Amendment, relating to the appointment of a commissary-general and the removal of militia officers, and Article V. of the Articles of Amendment are hereby annulled, and the following is adopted in place thereof:

ARTICLE X. All military and naval officers shall be selected and appointed and may be removed in such manner as the General Court may by law prescribe, but no such officer shall be appointed unless he shall have passed an examination prepared by a competent commission or shall have served one year in either the Federal or State militia or in military service. All such officers who are entitled by law to receive commissions shall be commissioned by the Governor.

SEVENTH AMENDMENT

Powers of the Governor as Commander-in-Chief

Article VII. of Section I. of Chapter II. of the Constitution is hereby annulled and the following is adopted in place thereof:

ARTICLE VII. The General Court shall provide by law for the recruitment, equipment, organization, training and discipline of the military and naval forces. The Governor shall be the Commander-in-Chief thereof, and shall have power to assemble the whole or any part of them for training, instruction or parade, and to employ them for the suppression of rebellion, the repelling of invasion, and the enforcement of the laws. He may, as authorized by the General Court, prescribe from time to time the organization of the military and naval forces and make regulations for their government.

EIGHTH AMENDMENT

Succession in Cases of Vacancies in the Offices of Governor and Lieutenant-Governor

Article VI. of Section III. of Chapter II. of the Constitution is hereby annulled and the following is adopted in place thereof:

Whenever the offices of Governor and Lieutenant-Governor shall both be vacant, by reason of death, absence from the Commonwealth, or otherwise, then one of the following officers, in the order of succession herein named, namely, the Secretary, Attorney-General, Treasurer and Receiver-General, and Auditor, shall, during such vacancy, have full power and authority to do and execute all and every such acts, matters and things as the Governor or the Lieutenant-Governor might or could lawfully do or execute, if they, or either of them, were personally present.

NINTH AMENDMENT

Return of Bills and Resolves by the Governor With Recommendation for Amendment

The Governor, within five days after any bill or resolve shall have been laid before him, shall have the right to return it to the branch of the General Court in which it originated with a recommendation that any amendment or amendments specified by him be made therein. Such bill or resolve shall thereupon be before the General Court and subject to amendment and re-enactment. If such bill or resolve is re-enacted in any form it shall again be laid before the Governor for his action, but he shall have no right to return the same a second time with a recommendation to amend.

TENTH AMENDMENT

Women to Be Eligible to Appointment as Notaries Public

Article IV. of the Articles of amendment of the Constitution of the Commonwealth is hereby amended by adding thereto the following words: Women shall be eligible to appointment as notaries public. Change of name shall render the commission void, but shall not prevent reappointment under the new name.

ELEVENTH AMENDMENT

Retirement of Judicial Officers

Article I. of Chapter III. of Part the Second of the Constitution is hereby amended by the addition of the following words:—and provided also that the Governor, with the consent of the Council, may after due notice and hearing retire them because of advanced age or mental or physical disability. Such retirement shall be subject to any provisions made by law as to pensions or allowances payable to such officers upon their voluntary retirement.

TWELFTH AMENDMENT

Revocation of Grants, Franchises, Privileges or Immunities

Every charter, franchise or act of incorporation shall forever remain subject to revocation and amendment.

THIRTEENTH AMENDMENT

Power of General Court to Establish Building Zones or Districts.

The General Court shall have power to limit buildings according to their use or construction to specified districts of cities and towns.

FOURTEENTH AMENDMENT

Compulsory Voting at Elections.

The General Court shall have authority to provide for compulsory voting at elections, but the right of secret voting shall be preserved.

FIFTEENTH AMENDMENT

Lending the Credit of the Commonwealth.

SECTION 1. The credit of the Commonwealth shall not in any manner be given or loaned to or in aid of any individual, or of any private association, or of any corporation which is privately owned and managed.

SECTION 2. The Commonwealth may borrow money to repel invasion, suppress insurrection, defend the Commonwealth, or to assist the United States in case of war, and may also borrow money in anticipation of receipts from taxes or other sources, such loan to be paid out of the revenue of the year in which it is created.

SECTION 3. In addition to the loans which may be contracted as before provided, the Commonwealth may borrow money only by a vote, taken by the yeas and nays, of two-thirds of each house of the General Court present and voting thereon. The governor shall recommend to the General Court the term for which any loan shall be contracted.

SECTION 4. Borrowed money shall not be expended for any other purpose than that for which it was borrowed or for the reduction or discharge of the principal of the loan.

SIXTEENTH AMENDMENT

A State Budget and Veto of Items by the Governor

SECTION 1. Collection of Revenue.—All money received on account of the Commonwealth from any source whatsoever shall be paid into the treasury thereof.

SECTION 2. The Budget.—Within three weeks after the convening of the General Court the Governor shall recommend to the General Court a budget which shall contain a statement of all proposed expenditures of the Commonwealth for the fiscal year, including those already authorized by law, and of all taxes, revenues, loans and other means by which such expenditures shall be defrayed. This shall be arranged in such form as the General Court may by law prescribe, or, in default thereof, as the Governor shall determine. For the purpose of preparing his budget, the Governor shall have power to require any board, commission, officer or department to furnish him with any information which he may deem necessary.

SECTION 3. The General Appropriation Bill.—All appropriations based upon the budget to be paid from taxes or revenues shall be incorporated in a single bill which shall be called the general appropriation bill. The General Court may increase, decrease, add or omit items in the budget. The General Court may provide for its salaries, mileage and expenses and for necessary expenditures in anticipation of appropriations, but before final action on the general appropriation bill it shall not enact any other appropriation bill except on recommendation of the Governor. The Governor may at any time recommend to the General Court supplementary budgets which shall be subject to the same procedure as the original budget.

SECTION 4. Special Appropriation Bills.—After final action on the general appropriation bill or on recommendation of the Governor, special appropriation bills may be enacted. Such bills shall provide the specific means for defraying the appropriations therein contained.

SECTION 5. Submission to the Governor.—The Governor may disapprove or reduce items or parts of items in any bill appropriating money. So much of such bill as he approves shall upon his signing the same become law. As to each item disapproved or reduced, he shall transmit to the house in which the bill originated his reason for such disapproval or reduction, and the procedure shall then be the same as in the case of a bill disapproved as a whole. In case he shall fail so to transmit his reasons for such disapproval or reduction within five days after the bill shall have been presented to him, such items shall have the force of law unless the General Court by adjournment shall prevent such transmission, in which case they shall not be law.

SEVENTEENTH AMENDMENT

Biennial Elections

SECTION 1. The Governor, Lieutenant-Governor, Councillors, Secretary, Treasurer and Receiver-General, Attorney-General, Auditor, Senators and Representatives shall be elected biennially. The Governor, Lieutenant-Governor and Councillors shall hold their respective offices from the first Wednesday in January succeeding their election to and including the first Wednesday in January in the third year following their election and until their successors are chosen and qualified. The terms of Senators and Representatives shall begin with the first Wednesday in January succeeding their election and shall extend to the first Wednesday in January in the third year following their election and until their successors are chosen and qualified. The terms of the Secretary, Treasurer and Receiver-General, Attorney-General and Auditor shall begin with the third Wednesday in January succeeding their election and shall extend to the third Wednesday in January in the third year following their election and until their successors are chosen and qualified.

SECTION 2. No person shall be eligible to election to the office of Treasurer and Receiver-General for more than three successive terms.

SECTION 3. The General Court shall assemble every year on the first Wednesday in January.

SECTION 4. The first election to which this article shall apply shall be held on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in November in the year nineteen hundred and twenty, and thereafter elections for the choice of all the officers before mentioned shall be held biennially on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in November.

EIGHTEENTH AMENDMENT

Appointment of Legislators to Office and Service Upon Recess Committees

No person elected to the General Court shall during the term for which he was elected be appointed to any office created or the emoluments whereof are increased during such term, nor receive additional salary or compensation for service upon any recess committee or commission except a committee appointed to examine a general revision of the statutes of the Commonwealth when submitted to the General Court for adoption.

NINETEENTH AMENDMENT

More Efficient Administration of the Business of the Commonwealth

On or before January first, nineteen hundred twenty-one, the executive and administrative work of the Commonwealth shall be organized in not more than twenty departments, in one of which every executive and administrative office, board and commission, except those officers serving directly under the Governor or the Council, shall be placed. Such departments shall be under such supervision and regulation as the General Court may from time to time prescribe by law.

The polls at said meetings will be opened at six o'clock A. M. and closed at four o'clock P. M.

President Has Nobly Voiced America's Ideals and Purposes

If any American citizen thinks that from the American point of view he can improve upon the President's last message to Germany, it would be a good exercise in statesmanship and diction for him to try.

In our opinion there has never been in this country a finer paper. The closing paragraph of the message states the whole war and peace situation so tersely and simply that the most ordinary citizen can understand it without effort. In the conclusion of the message the President says:

> Feeling that the whole peace of the world depends now on plain-speaking and straight-forward action, the President deems it his duty to say without any attempt to soften what may seem harsh words, that the nations of the world do not and cannot trust the word of those who have hitherto been the masters of German policy, and to point out once more that in concluding peace and attempting to undo the infinite injuries and injustices of this war the goverment of the United States cannot deal with any but veritable representatives of the German people who have been assured of genuine constitutional standing as the real rulers of Germany. If it must deal with the military masters and the monarchical autocrats of Germany now, or if it is likely to have to deal with them later in regard to the international obligations of the German empire, it must demand, not peace negotiations, but surrender.

The present German government seems to think that it is involving President Wilson and America in an inconsistency when it points out that the right of self-determination includes Germany as well as the countries which Germany has conquered or is holding in duress. But the inconsistency is superficial and not real. We have a right to insist upon the democratization of the German form of government as a matter of self-protection. Our attitude on the question of self-determination requires us to insist that the German people be given control of their government. The present rulers of Germany cannot say that because they are the rulers of Germany that the people of Germany have determined to make them rulers. Nothing is further from the truth. The elections in Germany before the war show with absolute certainty that a majority of the German people desire to assume control of their own affairs. But when practically their whole manhood is under military control it is absurd to assume, as the German government does, that it exists by choice of the German people.

Moreover, under the circumstances, in a political situation which gives rise to a set of rulers who hold solemn treaties to be nothing more than scraps of paper, who disregard with contempt international conventions, established rules of warfare and standards of civilization, it is perfectly apparent that we must insist upon dealing with another set of men produced by another kind of political conditions in Germany.

The German people are a valuable part of the great white race. We do not want to destroy them or in any way to impair their capacity to contribute to our civilization. We believe that they have been greatly sinned against by their rulers and that our insistence that their rulers must be changed and that they themselves must run their own affairs is as much an act in their interest as in our own. It is not necessary that we should convince the German people that we are acting in their interest. We know that we are doing right and what is in the interest and for the safety of the rest of the world. Therefore, no intelligent German capable of looking at both sides of the question can deny that the President is right when he says that if we have to deal with the men who brought on this war and who have fought it in violation of all the restraints of civilization, we must deal with them in a condition of powerlessness—that is, after surrender. We obviously cannot make agreements with men who have already asserted that agreements are mere scraps of paper in the face of their necessities and who upon that philosophy have almost drowned the world in human blood.

On the other hand, we notice that a small reactionary group in the United States Senate, headed by Senator Lodge, is snarling because the President is willing to continue correspondence with Germany. They use language and strike an attitude that if it were imitated by the President and could be assumed to be the attitude of America would drive the German people to despair and would make them believe what their present rulers have labored to make them believe for four years—that their enemies are seeking to destroy them absolutely and forever and that nothing short of destruction can bring them peace. To make the German people believe such a thing would be to drive them closer under the control of their military class—to make them put their backs to the wall—to fight with the desperation of despair. It would mean the loss of hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of American youths—a price that we are willing to pay to accomplish the expressed objects of this war, but which we are not willing to pay merely for the gratification of grinding the enemy's face in the dust without an adequate object.

Senator Lodge and his coadjutors seem to forget that the German armies still exist, that they are still far from their own borders and that every time they retreat, by shortening their lines, they make it harder for us to attack them. We can conquer them if we exert our utmost strength, and they know it. It is that knowledge which leads them to approach the preliminaries of what they know must end in a peace in which they must pay the price of defeat. But if the price is not to be the price of destruction, if the price is not to be set by vengeful men, but by men who will calmly hold the balance of justice and weigh things nicely, the German people, we believe, have now reached a state of mind in which they will compel cessation of fighting, fully prepared to pay a reasonable price of defeat and of the harm wrought by their leaders.

We do not want to drive the German people to despair, we do not want to make them believe that we seek to destroy them, because it would compel us to fight on with a useless destruction of hundreds of thousands of our boys, because the German people have been given a false idea of our purpose.

The presence of Woodrow Wilson as our chief magistrate at this critical hour, and the magnificent way in which he is handling the crisis, is another proof of the favor in which the American Republic stands with fortune.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

War Work Agencies

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

A number of letters from different sections of the country have come to my desk recently, all raising the same question:

> If peace should come early next year, will the war work agencies still need this huge sum of money?

Because this question must be in the minds of scores of your readers, I wish it might be possible for you to help us answer it editorially.

The answer is, of course, obvious to any one who has given the matter thought. The demobilization of a great army is always a slow and difficult process. Even after the Franco-Prussian War, which lasted only a few months, demobilization occupied more than a year. The demobilization of the huge forces in France, and their transportation to their own countries, is going to be a matter not of weeks but of very many months. When I was in Europe the Canadian military authorities stated that it would take fifteen months to bring their army home. No one has questioned that it will require a full year or more to demobilize our American forces.

And during those months, when the tension of battle has been lifted and discipline relaxed, there will be need of the influence of the war work agencies in redoubled measure. For example, the educational programs which have been laid out, with the approval of the government, will turn every hut in France into a university classroom and make those months of readjustment months that will count permanently in the lives of our boys.

The American people will want to make generous provision, not merely for the period of the war but for the demobilization period as well, once they understand the need.

Will you help us to make them understand? They have stood by the boys loyally thus far. Let us determine that no matter when the war ends we will stand by them until the last boy steps off the gangplank over here, at the end of his journey home.

JOHN R. MOTT,
Director-General,
United War Work Campaign.

Railway Transportation

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Mr. Bauer's letter in the Boston AMERICAN of October 23 is interesting from the standpoint of his proposition and the efforts that were made to put the transportation companies in a position where they could sell their wares at a profit.

It was impossible to convince Mr. Bauer at the time, when the credits of the corporations were being ruined, the values debased and transportation destroyed, that concerns that sold their wares below cost were a menace to the community.

You find today people paying high rates for most unsatisfactory transportation. This is most serious, for with the credits destroyed, efficient transportation is impossible.

It will take large sums of money to put New England where it can be of service from the standpoint of transportation, both human and freight; where it can give us transportation, which is the all-essential, and at reasonable rates, which is most necessary.

Mr. Bauer is undoubtedly a man of integrity, but wholly without experience or knowledge of the subject he is dealing with.

The point that interests me is, that if ten-cent fares or seven-cent fares are warranted now, why should not the Public Service Commission have put them in operation when they were asked for, particularly as over five years ago Mr. Macleod and Mr. Anderson, both then members of the commission, said that an increase in fares was immediately needed to maintain the credit of the corporations.

Is New England a safe place to invest money in?

Not if the commissions compel selling goods below cost.

This is so self-evident that a campaign of publicity should be made, in order to see who was at fault and what can and should be done from the standpoint of public good.

I'M QUITE sure.
THAT WHEN he was little.
HE USED to say pieces.
IN THE parlor.
FOR THE minister.
WHENEVER HE called.
AND THAT his mother.
MADE HIM do it.
AND BRAGGED about it.
AND PEOPLE hated him.
AND, ANYWAY.
WHEN I saw him.
HE WAS fourteen.
AND WAITING for me.
WHEN I got to the office.
AND HE was so polite.
AND SO old.
AND BOWED so much.
THAT AT first.
I WANTED to slap him.
AND THEN I remembered.
THAT THEY got that way.
FROM SAYING pieces.
FOR THEIR mothers.
IN FRONT of company.
AND I forgave him.
AND IN a little while.
HE OPENED a package.
THAT HE had with him.
AND THERE were handkerchiefs.
AND BITS of dollies.
AND ALL sorts of things.
THAT WERE made of linen.
AND HE told me.
HIS MOTHER made them.
OUT OF some linen.
THAT SHE had in a chest.
FOR YEARS and years.
AND SHE had to do it.
THE BOY said.
BECAUSE THE father.
HAD GONE to France.
AND THEIR slender means.
WERE NOT sufficient.
TO PROVIDE for all.
AND THERE were tears.
IN THE boy's voice.
AS HE told me the story.
AND THE fight she'd made.
AND OF the long nights.
THAT SHE sat and sewed.
ON THE precious things.
THAT SHE had made.
AND HE wanted to sell them.
AND WANTED to know.
IF I couldn't help him.
AND HOW I could do it.
• • •
SO I told the boy.
• • •
I'D BUY his handkerchiefs.
AND TAKE them home.
TO MY wife.
AND I paid him three dollars.
FOR SIX.
AND WHEN he thanked me.
THERE WERE tears in his eyes.
• • •
AND THE rest of the things.
HE WRAPPED up again.
AND I went home.
AND TOLD my wife.
THE WHOLE sad story.
AND GAVE her the handkerchiefs.
AND THEY weren't linen.
AND THERE were price marks on them.
THAT SAID 10c.
AND THERE was a mark on one.
WHERE THE boy cried.
WHEN HE sold them to me.

I THANK you.

The Very Idea of Asking Perfect Strangers to Pass Judgment Upon So Pretty a Girl as Stella Rawson!—MUCH More Reasonable Is Our Young Friend Arthur, Who Inquires About Czecho-Slovaks and Such.

We have received the following letter:

> Dear Editor:—I am a pupil in what I hope may be my final year in grammar school. I have always been greatly interested in History and Geography. I read everything I can get my hands on. Until a few weeks ago, I had never heard any mention of such a people as the Czecho-Slovaks, the Ukrainians or the Jugo-Slavs. Now, we see them mentioned every day. Only last night, I listened to a heated discussion concerning their rights and their standing, between my father and Mr. Henry Adlotz, who lives next door. Where can I get some information concerning the Czecho-Slovaks and the part of the world they inhabit? (Signed) ARTHUR B. L.

And we would say to Arthur B. L., and to every man and woman in New England, young or old, that they will find heaps of timely information in the War Map to be distributed tomorrow with every number of the Sunday ADVERTISER-AMERICAN.

The subject of tomorrow's War Map is "The Austrian Empire and Its Subject Nationalities." It shows, in detail, the abodes of the various races that go to make up what HAS been called "Austria-Hungary." From this map, our young friend Arthur and such others of our friends as may be interested in the subject will learn that "Czecho-Slovaks" is another name for the people formerly called Bohemians.

We hope our friends have been preserving these War Maps. It may be months before a Settlement Board concludes the work of repairing and restoring the face of the world. In the meantime, the Geography we relied upon in 1914 is no more to be depended upon now than a trusted but thirsty employe sent out upon a delicate mission in the territory where John Barleycorn is still big and all powerful.

Since that Sunday when it was our privilege to publish for the first time in New England, the latest march of John Philip s. o. U. S. A., we have not been so happy in our War Song Supplement as we shall be when tomorrow we distribute "Songs of the Allies."

The songs selected are four in number: Henry Carey's "God Save the King," Rouget de L'Isle's "La Marseillaise," Olivieri's "Garibaldi Hymn" and Campenhout's "La Brabanconne," national anthem of Belgium.

About the time Karl and the Kaiser learn to say "I surrender, unconditionally"—and say the words in a way which leaves no opportunity for misunderstanding or misconstruction—all of us who play will desire to step to the piano and run over these "Songs of the Allies." Get tomorrow's song supplement, and be prepared.

Is the Boston of the future to be a "great shipping center," famous the wide world over, or is Boston after-the-war to be merely a "struggling port"?

In the Sunday ADVERTISER-AMERICAN the question is asked and answered by General Hugh Bancroft, that brilliant young man who, only a year or two ago, was Chairman of the Directors of the Port.

General Bancroft says the natural and geographical advantages of Boston being well known, this old town SHOULD be one of the great seaports of the world. It CAN be, he says, WITH the help of Washington.

He means Washington's help in railroad-rate making, to the end that Boston may have a chance IN Chicago WITH Baltimore and Philadelphia.

This interview with Gen. Bancroft is illuminating. We recommend it to every New Englander interested in the commercial future of his section.

Almost on the eve of his seventy-seventh birthday, former Governor Lucius F. C. Garvin, grand old man of Rhode Island politics, favors us with an interview on the political, industrial and economic situation in "Little Rhody."

Our good friend Garvin declares for the public ownership and operation of the Rhode Island trolleys. He hopes to see Archambeault elected Governor. He wants George O'Shaunessy sent to the United States Senate. He says—

But read it ALL, tomorrow, in the Sunday ADVERTISER-AMERICAN.

We might say, before passing on, that the Garvin interview is written by Mr. Charles O. Power.

THAT means, as our older readers know, that it is not only extremely readable but absolutely reliable.

One of the young ladies of the Sunday staff has brought in an amazing story, filled with facts about the Boston Army Supply Base, out here in Summer Street Extension, which will be completed at New Year's.

It will be the largest building in the world, with a total floor area of 1,600,000 square feet, or forty acres.

Between 5,000 and 7,000 men have been engaged upon it, two shifts a day, since last April.

It is eight stories high.

The total Government appropriation for the Army Supply building, pier-shed and Naval building, was $28,000,000.

The work has gone along at such speed that, instead of high charges for demurrage, the general contractors have a "demurrage credit" of 4,635 hours.

What shall we do with these buildings after the war?

The young lady addressed that question to Mr. W. F. Kearns.

YOU, probably, would have asked the same question.

Read in the Sunday ADVERTISER-AMERICAN how Mr. Kearns answers it.

In the Magazine Section, a second instalment of Elinor Glyn's newest story, "Did She Do Right?" in which we meet (in Rome) an exquisitely beautiful young Englishwoman, are introduced to her betrothed, a young curate, and witness (alas!) the appearance on the scene of a Russian nobleman with as much money as Rockefeller.

Mrs. Glyn has already confided to her readers that Stella (that's the beauty's name) falls in love with the "other man." And Elinor asks the question, "Did She Do Right?"

We reserve our reply until we have read ALL.

The Comic Section prepared for tomorrow would make the Kaiser laugh while hearing the Wilson message suggesting unconditional surrender to Foch et als. But, all joking aside, we DO wish Mr. Rube Goldberg and Mr. Frederic Opper would give Boob McNutt and H. Hooligan just a teeny weeny little the best of it once in a million weeks.

P. S.—One word additional to say that the "Songs of the Allies" to be printed tomorrow in the Supplement are taken from a celebrated publication, "The National Songs of the Allies," published this year by the famous old house of Oliver Ditson Company. New England has known the house of Ditson since 1834 and, in New England, as elsewhere, the name stands for honesty, value, reliability.
